TRANSCONTINENTAL CONNEC-TION.

We are led to understand that a de finite proposal has at last been made to some representative citizens, of Victoria in regard to direct connection with the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and that the scheme submitted to them is now under consideration.

So far as we have been able to ascertain, the proposal emanates from the management of the E. & N. Railway Company, and is in effect that the company are prepared, should the city enter into an agreement satisfactory to all concerned, to put on a direct ferrytransfer service between some point or the E. & N. line (presumably Chemainus) and Vancouver, the boats to do the trip in not less than three and a half hours. This would, of course, give Victoria direct connection with the C. P. R., and would virtually make this city the western terminus of that sys-

The first morning he reported for duty he found on his desk the usual note from the chief reporter containing his day's "assignments." The very first thing on that list was this: "Go to Mrs. James Smith, 1682 Wa-bash avenue, and ask her why she refuses to live with her husband, and when her case is likely to come up in court."

The young reporter was terribly distressed-for a moment-then he stepped in to the chief reporter's room, laid the note on that gentleman's desk' and said quietly: "That is not the kind of newspaper work I want to do. The chief stared at the youngster a second: "Sure?" "Quite sure, sir." "Then you may go to the counting house and get what is coming to you; that's all, good morning." And the youngster went.

His name is Stephen Bonsall, and some of his subsequent newspaper work was quoted by the late Mr. Gladstone on the floor of the British House of Commons, during a debate on one of the most serious foreign problems Great Britain has had to face since the Crimean war. Mr. Bonsall would not have taken an "assignment" we fancy, to go and ask a minister of the crown a couple of insulting questions. But it is not the reporter who is to blame fo

A CALIFORNIA TRAGEDY

Two Women Found Dead in a Lodging House-Supposed Murder and Sulcide.

Stockton, Cala., May 3. - Mrs. William Hickman and Mrs. H. A. Hassall, of this ity, were found dead in bed together yesrday in a lodging house. A pistol which lay between them had evidently fallen from the hand of Mrs. Hassall, who shot Mrs. Hickman and herself. Mrs. Hassall seemed infatuated with Mrs

Hickman and the utmost efforts of her relatives to keep them apart failed. Mrs. Hassall had told a companion she intended departing for London, and begged Mrs. Hickman to spend the night with her for the last time. They went to Mrs. Hassall's apartments about ten p.m. and that was the last seen of them alive.

Mrs. Hickman had a good reputation and was living with her husband. Mrs. Hassall was the wife of H. A. Hassall, an Englishman, but has been separated from him since August last on account of her infatuation for Mrs. Hickman. She was beautiful and an heiress.
