BOSTON CHINESE DENS.

THE COUNCIL HUNTED FOR A SPICY REPORT IN VAIN.

BOSTON, Dec. 14-By the death of John Greenleat Whittier the colored people of the United States lost a triend. to whom they looked for help in many difficulties. He was one of the men who stirred the souls of America and Europe. with poetry conditions of men, and his work was appreciated by the negro.

Sunday night the Colored National league of Boston held a service in memory of the poet, and the glow of eloquence from negro orators, original poetry eulogistic of patriot, and sweet melody from a large negro choir, all told of freedom not yet enjoyed.

Old war stories were retold, the cruelty of feels her spirits go down to zero as Christthe Southern masters recalled, the days when the negro pew, and the negro school harder than to plan or select presents for were things apart, referred to with pathos only commanded by a white haired darkie, anything which will not be of some little lectures gave hundreds of Americans ideas of Nova Scotia which prompted the desire to spend the summer in the east.

Mr. J. J. O'Hearn who made a host of friends in St. John, while manager of Collier's publishing house, is now devoting all his energies to the insurance business. In doing this he is working out an old idea, and is now in the way of making a grand success of it. Mr. O'Hearn's experience on his return to Boston as told by himself is amusing. He intended to start in on his insurance scheme, but every old friend he met gave him such a beat old times, that he hadn't the courage to introduce the subject of insurance to them, and had to give it up as a bad job. He returned to the book business, and after the people got through with the reception, dropped it and took up insurance.

HINTS FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

I do not wonder that the girl who has ms approaches, because few things are when the negro pew, and the negro school were things apart, referred to with patho only commanded by a white haired darkie, and a crowded church listended with breathless attention. The older people who remembered the path bowd their heads; tears trickled down big black cheeks, and the younger fry looked serious.

But the negro like most humanity, while perhaps thankful for small mercies, is not content. He wants the whole hog. Just what he does want I do not know, but here in Boston he gets nearly all he asks for A respectable negro gets along without trouble, and in schools and churchestrains and steamboats, in fact, no where is white. In toot ball games where the players are all mixed up in such a way that it is impossible to tell where to find the head or legs belonging to any particular body, and perspiration runs from every pore in every man, in such a mass of arruggling a couple of negroes pushing and fighting with the rest.

If this is not receiving him as a brother and letting him mingle with the favored race, what more can be done?

But the negro wants more, and at every man, in such a mass of arruggling a couple of negroes pushing and fighting with the rest.

But the negro wants more, and at every more in the probably who objected to the favored class always picked out a particular people to drive from pillar to post, the foot more of the favored class always picked out a particular people to drive from pillar to post, the foot more of the favored class always picked out a particular people to drive from pillar to post, the foot more of the favored class always picked out a particular people to drive from pillar to post, the foot more of the favored class always picked out a particular people to drive from pillar to post, the foot more of the favored probably who objected to the class and probably who objected to the charman of the case of the near probably who objected to the charman of the company of the probably who objected to the charman of the probably who
