
SCIENCE IX.

The results in Grade IX call for no special comment except that I wish to draw the attention of teachers very particularly to the remarks I made in the Journal of October, 1913, regarding the description of flowers. The descriptions are still very lacking in definiteness tho there is not so much irrelevant matter. I think it would be well to try a similar question next year to see if some improvement cannot be made.

The average standing in Grade IX this year was very nearly the same as last year.

UNIVERSITY GRADUATES' EXAMINATION.

The syllabus and regulations governing this examination will be found beginning at page 218 of the Journal of Education, October 1913.
