A city clerk has points of law, disputes and many other things to decide beyond his ordinary arduous routine duties of office. Xesterday City Clerk Merrift was busy deciding the jurisdiction of the city over the cema-tery road. Hogs have been rooting up the road and the caretaker has been wondering whether to impound them in the township of Harwich or in Chatham. The city bought the road to the cemetery and threwa it open for traffic. The city attended to all re-pairs and kept the road in order, but the pigs made it necessary for the civic authorities to decide what rights they have over the road. The cemitery, although beyond the pale of the city's gates, is considered by law as within the corporation. The road was bought for cemetery purposes. The clerk referred the matter to the city licitor, who decided that the city had jurisdiction over the road and the pigs impounded will be the enforced guests of the city.

The farmer, somewhat the worse from gazing too long on the bowl that flows cheerfulness, wandered into the room and was caught worse than a fly in a trap. I heard the noise and going out to locate the trouble found my paper room had an occupant who had little regard for the beauty of my wall paper. I spoke to him. He responded with query as to where he was and how the lock-up and, as Judge Houston was out of town he, the farmer, would have to stay where he was. t Caus.d a Profound Sensation and Much : xcitement by Ex. ggarated Rumor.

"Boy drowned in the river!" These were the words-passed of from mouth to mouth-which caused so much excitement in the city short-ly before three o'clock this afternoon. The rumor, as first stated, was the simple fact that a boy was drowned. But before it had circulated far it had assumed massive proportions. The little boy was said to be the only son of a widowed mother and was em ployed as an errand boy in one of the dry goods stores, and now his aged mother would be left alone in the world with no one to support her. Others went so far as to say that wo little fellows were fighting or the Park dock when one, evidently the smaller, was knocked off into the water and drowned, while the other unfortunate lad was cruelly hand-cuffed and marched over to the police court to answer to a charge of mur-der in the first degree. Naturally, people became interested and it was not long before a large crowd had gathered at the Park dock to view the scene of the appalling tragedy.

They were considedably surprise however, to find that no one was there except D. A. Hutchinson, who was engaged in pushing a lawn-mower up and down the bowling nd the Little Accident Prever 61 Blenheim from Greeting a Distinguished Trio.

Three Maple City young men intended to visit Blenheim Fair yesterday. They didn't do it, all on account of the death of a horse. Many causes have kept young men from the fair before, but this is the first known instance wherer the fair at Blenheim has missed the presence of three prominent patrons by reason of such a trifling incident as a dead horse. What Blenheim missed by the accident she will never know.

The facts are these. The your men secured a rig from a local livery to go to Blenheim. They had gone a little over three miles, when the horse began to wobble and had scarcely gone the four miles when the horse lay down and died, just opposite Joseph Young's place on the town line. The trio sent in word with a farmer and the liveryman sent out another rig with a veterinary surgeon, and, inci-dentally, to bring the three home The horse doctor gave the cause of death as acute indigestion, and the remains were taken care of. The three, however, returned home, having con to the decision that Blenheim fair would be over by the time they reach

"A little boy, not over six years of age, ran out of a house on that street crying as if his heart would break and was immediately followed by his other who was pursuing him with a and was immediately followed by his father, who was pursuing him with a horse whip. The terrified child started across the road and when about half way across was caught by the enraged father, who proceeded to cut him around the body with the whip. Meanwhile the child was giving vent to piercing screams and begging piteously for mercy. He finally got away and ran back to the house screaming. "Please don't! I'll do it now!"

"The father pursued him again, uttering fearful threats. This case should be looked after by the Children's Aid Society.
