The Man Who Won't Work.

War always looses men's worst passions The killing of human beings, when the last word has been said in justification of it, is a brutal and debasing business. There is so much glamour, excitement, and uncertainty about war that the hardened soldier is not anxious to return to civil life. He finds the discipline of peace far more exacting than the discipline of war.

If he is a sensible person, however, he will try to adapt himself to his new surroundings. It is far better for himself to do so.

Unfortunately, however, all men are not sensible. Thomas Carlyle said bluntly that most of them were fools. If he were heré to-day, he would probably repeat his scorching statement with emphasis. Why? Because a great many of the people of Canada are fiddling while Rome burns. Pampered and spoiled by the luxuries and excitements of war, they have grown irresponsible, lazy, and inordinately selfish. The day laborer is strutting around with a cigarette in his mouth, and his attitude reeks with insolence. He has a little money in his pocket, it is not very hard to find a job, and so he is not worrying about the future. He doesn't wantto work. The skilled worker is drawing bigger wages than he ever drew before. Taking it by and large, he is doing less work, and poorer work, than he ever did before. His attitude towards his employer is surly and uncompromising. He is not seriously concerned about the quality or quantity of his work. He is able to command big wages, and the thought of bigger wages takes up so much of his time that his work is shoddy. He spends a good part of his spare time in denouncing the high cost of living, yel he makes little or no attempt to curtain his own extravagances. His expensive labor, coupled with his small output, one of the chief causes of the high cos of living that he is constantly crying out against. The skilled worker, because he is very comfortable, is also suffering from an enhanced appreciation of his own importance. Our National debt is a stag gering one, and it is growing. Our population is small, and we are going to have to shoulder big taxation burdens. We cannot escape them. Capital is playing safe. Financiers are not investing money in enterprises that depend for their success on labor. The markets are topsy-turvy. Each nation is protecting itself. With the exception of the Unite States, all the leading nations of the world are groaning under a load of debt. Their workers are truculent too. They, too, want the luxuries of the war to continue, but they do not want to work harder to keep these luxuries. In short, this seems to be the day of selfishness greed and discontent. Large sections of our producing classes seem to be totally irresponsible.

Danger lurks just around the corner. Make no mistake about that. We are in for some bad times—unless we head them off. All sorts of people are coming forward with all sorts of remedies for our National ills. Our worst National ill at the present time is the arrogance, selfishness and irresponsibility of the common people. They are not thinking about the future. They are not thinking about good They are not thinking government. about the serious crisis through which we may pass in the near future. They are comfortable, and so, like Nero, fiddle while Rome burns."

There is only one ending to this drama. Unless we work, we will go without work. Unless we curtail our extravagant habits, we will some day face the sobering fact that we must do without necessities. In short, we are going to be taught common sense by adversity. Fate has a peculiar way of solving problems for us. A large number of people, whose heads are a little dizzy at present, are going to be starved into a humbler and more sensible frame of mind before another twelve months have passed. Honest toil and right living will solve our problems.
