ENGLAND.

Mr. Parnell made on the 28th the most significant and notable speech that has yet been heard in the House of Commons this session. It was in continuance of the debate upon the demand of the Irish members that the Government should order an inquiry into the Maamtrasna trial and execution. The House was crowded with members and others having the privilege of the floor having the privilege of the floor, and the galleries were crammed with spectators. Mr. Parnell was in good voice and form, notwithstanding his ill-ness during the summer. His whole speech was a passionate philippic against the British Government for its misrule of Ireland. He went out of his way de-liberately and studiously to insult every thing English that is connected with Ireland. He touched briefly upon the revolting scandals that had been brought home to certain Dublin Castle officials, and sneered at the Government's anxiety to retain in his exalted position that "dear, good man, Earl Spencer, who had winked at or condoned these outrages by his subordinates." There were several interruptions of a personal sort anger. At such times he was compel'al to pause on account of the cheers from the Liberal benches, but when he made a telling reply to the interrupter, coun-ter cheers arose from the Home Rulers. It is admitted that Mr. Parnell's speech was the finest he has ever made since the Kilmainham Treaty episode. Its immediate effect, however, is not advan-tageous to the Irish cause. It has simply irmed the Government in its deterination to refuse an inquiry into the Maamtrasna case.

A vote was taken upon the amendment to the address offered by Harrington (Home Ruler), that the administration tion laws in Ireland was unsatisfactory and an inquiry into the Maamtrasna tria will lead to great contentment among the people. The amendment was rejected by 219 to 47. The feature of the debate was the manner the Ministerial mem-bers resented the vituperation poured upon Earl Spencer, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

In consequence of Mr. Gladstone's remarks in the House refusing to sanction a motion for investigation into the Maamtrasna trial, the Irish party have determined to raise the home rule ques-tion before the close of the debate on

A serious panic occurred in Glasgow on November 1st, at the Star Theatre, or aused by a cryof fire. During the rush of the audience to escape from the building sixteen people were killed and twelve seriously injured. The performance proceeded without interruption until shortly after 9 o'clock, when some person shouted "fire." The whole audiperson shouted "fire." The whole audience instantly rose to their feet and made a rush to the several exits. The great mass of people in the pit, in rush.

The mass of panic-stricken and struggling humanity were appealed to by officers of the theatre and by the police to hold back, but the appeals were unheeded. The crazed crowd franticular transfer of the structure of the police to hold back, but the appeals were unheeded. The crazed crowd frantically pressed towards the outlets, trampling down and over the weaker ones, until the street was reached. When the theatre was finally cleared, sixteen corpses were found on the stairs leading from the gallery, and twelve persons were so badly injured they only gave evidence that life was not extinct by their piteous moanings. Upon the first alarm being rung the whole fire brigade quickly went to the rescue, and with the police did their utmost to allay the panic and rescue the dead and dying, panic and rescue the dead and dying, but they were too late to be of much effective service. The police and citizens finally succeeded in forcing their way into the building and then aided all they could to escape to the street, but the mass was so wedged they were sadly interfered with in their humane labors.

EGYPT. A Cairo dispatch says:—The rumors from native sources to the effect that Khartoum has at last yielded to rebels who swarmed in from the country in great numbers. Another report has it that Gordon was surprised through treachery and compelled to surrender after a desperate attempt to drive back the rebels.

the rebels.

A Cairo despatch says General Wolseley has reached Sarras. The plan of Wolseley's expedition to Khartoum furnished him a total force of 8,500 English troops. He will take 5,000 of these to Dongola, leaving a reserve corps of 3,500 at Wady Halfa. The Mudir of Dongola has promised to furnish a contingent of 3,000 men, composed of members of mercenary tribes, armed with Remington mercenary tribes, armed with Remington rifles. If an advance in force is deemed necessary beyond Dongola the reserve will be pushed on from Wady Halfa, several sheikhs escorting Wolseley from Wady Halfa to Ambigol. The Canadian boatmen speak lightly of the obstructions and difficulties of the Nile cataratary.

Cairo, November 1.—A special dispatch to the Khedive from Dongola conveys the graphic recital of Chinese Gordon's capture as told by an Arch Shiek who left Shendy on October 7.

As long as seven weeks ago, runs the story, Khartoum was surrounded by a host of rebels from the Nile country. On account of the scarcity of provisions serious disaffection arose among the garrison. This feeling, though largely among the men, was shared by the officers, who in a body, informed Gen. Gordon that they believed the time had come to give in. Gen. Gordon's answer angered the officers. They accused him of deceit, by putting them in peril of their lives to add to his personal glory in case he withstood the repeated assaults of the rebels until the relief should come. Gordon tried to calm them by saying that the relief expedition had reached Dongola, They demanded that he order an advance to meet it. Gordon finally agreed to meet it, Gordon finally agreed to this and ordered Col. Stewart to prepare the boats. Before this brave officer had completed his arrangements some 8,000 of the garrison went over to the rebels and Gordon found himself with about 2,000 whom he could trust. It was now clear to Gordon that nothing was left but retreat, and with the remnant of his force he dropped down the Nile towards Shendy. The banks immediately swarmed with rebels, who after a few miles had been passed threw continuous showers of spears and arrows at the retreating forces. Many were wounded and some quite seriously Thousands of natives poured down from the mountain where they had long been in waiting for the final struggle. They harassed the troops by pouring volleys into them from rifles that they secured by treachery. Their aim was good and many on the boats were badly wounded. When Shendy was reached, it was in possession of the rebels. Here they were met by Shendy was reached, it was in possession of the rebels. Here they were met by an effective artillery fire, in trying to evade which many of the boats were grounded on the opposite bank of the Nile, and their occupants taken prisoners. Many of the boats were then disabled and those that succeeded in runing the blocked authors as they disabled and those that succeeded in runing the blocked authors as they disabled and those that succeeded in runing the blocked authors. ning the blockade gathered a short dis-tance below Shendy for a consultation.

All this time they were followed by a galling fire from the rebels on either bank. Gordon ordered a return to Khartoum, rather than expose the remainder of his command to certain death. At this time Col. Stewart's boat was far in advance of the flotilla, and the signal to return was unseen by him, as he pro-ceeded onward. He is known to have passed Berber, but beyond that nothing is known of his fate. All the other boats obeyed Gordon's command and started on the return, still followed by hordes of rebels, maddened with the certainty of victory over the great Gordon. The command behaved nobly, but in the upward passage were beset by myriads of the command behaved nobles to be the command behaved nobles. the enemy, and in attempting to pass Shendy the fire was so hot that Gordon was compelled to surrender. The Republique Francaise says the coming elections for the French Senate and Chamber will be a fierce struggle, the enemies of the present regime having the advantage on their side owing to the agricultural discontent, the misfortune of the Chinese war and the deficit in the budget. It says the country can be trusted to again reject the Royalists, who, if again badly beaten, must forever disappear as a political party.

which time you have gained our anections by the efficient manner in which you performed amongst us your high and holy office as a priest of God and his holy church. You have labored earnestly and zealously for our eternal salvation. You were always ready to sacrifice pleasure and comfort in order to promote and advance both our spiritual and temporal welfare. We are fully convinced that you always had in view the object of conveying to us the sentiments and wishes of our worthy and highly respected pastor, Father Flannery. You faithfully performed and carried out his desires in regard to our spiritual wants. The golden maxims with which you have inspired and stimulated us to a sense of the duty we owe to God will make you ever be remembered with feelings of tenderness and to God will make you ever be remembered with feelings of tenderness and respect. Our best wishes shall ever attend you, and we humbly request that you will remember us and our families in your prayers at the altar of God during the holy sacrifice of the mass.

My DEAR FRIENDS :—I thank you very much for the kind sentiments to which much for the kind sentiments to which you have given utterance in your address. You have spoken of the feelings of attachment subsisting between us and your sorrow on learning of my intended removal from your midst. I have no doubt that you feel regret on my leaving you, as I also do on separating myself from so many tried friends and from a people so devoted. It is true your joys have been my joys, and your sorrows also mine, but obedience is a beautiful virtue that ought to reign in every Christian soul, and esence is a beautiful virtue that ought to reign in every Christian soul, and especially so in the heart of a priest of God. I am called upon by our beloved bishop to labour in another field for the salvation of souls, where perhaps my services are more needful. I act in obedience to his call, and hope that Almighty God will assist me by his divine grace to carry out the designs of our good and zealous bishop in saving souls and advancing the Christian religion. You referred to the zeal with which I have laboured among you and the active part I took in enlarging and embellishing the Dunwich, if I enlarged and embellished to some extent, your church, I can assure you that I only carried out the desire of your that I only carried out the desire of you good and worthy pastor, Father Flannery a desire which he had at heart for years but was unable to accomplish until the present summer. I attribute no the present summer. I attribute no merit to myself for the good work done. I only regret that I could not do more towards embellishing your church; however, I did all I possibly could considering the means at our disposal. I regret I had not the opportunity of doing something for the Aldborough church; or rather of not having the time and means for building a new church in Bismarck, as for building a new church in Bismarck, as many of the good people of Aldborough mission wish. In labouring zealously among you, in order to promote your spiritual and temporal welfare, I only did my duty as a priest of God.
