Brilliant a Social Event in the Drill Hall

The ball on Thursday night by the commandant and efficers of the Royal School of Infantry, was the most brilliant social event of a very gay and social season. The species drill hall in which the ball was bald, was magnifecently decorated for the occasion. Bunting and evergrees were freely displayed, which were lilluminated by colored lights. Besides the extensive decorations Joverhead, the walls were adorned with pictures, crossed rides, swords and stars of bayonets, the whole of which presented a very beautiful effect. About eighty couples were present. The totlet of some of the ladies in attendance was very disc. Much was farnished by the R. I. S. C. band from the gallery which was also very elaborately decorated. The programme of dances was as follows: Quadrille, Valse, Galop, Lancert, Valse, Polka, Galop, Quadrille, Valse, Manurks, (Polka), Polka, Lancers, Valse, Qaadrille, Valse, Polka, Lancers, Valse,

The result of this legislation, so far as cheet during the period aince elapsed. The result of this legislation, so far as tested by this short experience, is satisfactory. Crime has diminished, and the power of coercive conspiracies has sensibly abated.

Measures tending to develop the resources of Ireland, and to facilitate increase in the number of proprietors of the soil, will be laid before you.

Your attention will be invited to the subject of local government in England. Measures will be submitted for dealing with it and with proposals for adjusting the relations between the local and imperial finance and for mitigating burdens imposed upon the rate-payers.

The prospects of commerce are more hopeful than any which we have been able to point to in many years.

I deeply regret there has been no corresponding improvement observable in the condition of agriculture. I recommend interests of that industry to your attentive care.

You will be invited to consider legis

In the house of commons, Gladstone on entering the house was loadly cheered. Hartington left his seat, went and shook hands with him, sat down and entered into an animated conversation.

Mr Ritchie, conservative, gave notic of the introduction of a local governmen

Mr. Gladstone said he rose to speak at this early stage of the debate hoping it might contribute to expedite business before the house. He ould congratulate the government on some aspects of their foreign policy, the question of the Afghan boundary, so long a source of danger to two great empires was settled. It was a great thing in itself, and he trusted it would modify the j-alou-ies existing regarding territorial extension of Russia. So far as he was aware, no other cause for misunderstanding remained between the two nations. (Hear, hear.) Referring to Ireland, Gladstone said that, while the opposition were anxious to expedite business, the government's policy in Ireland could not be lightly passed over. (Cheers.) The whole subject of administration of coercion must, through amendment, be debated. The government could not be congratulated on assisting to diminish the number of Measures which, at great labor, you passed last session for the benefit of Iral land have been carefully carried into effect during the period since elapsed.

You will be invited to consider legislative proposals for cheaping the transfer of land, for modifying procedure by which the rent is collected, for promoting technical education, for preventing undue preferences in rates charged by railways on foreign and domestic produce, for remedying abuses in the formation of companies under the limited liability act, for amending the law of liability of employers in case of accidents, for improving the position of Scottish universities, for regulating borough police of Scotland and for diminishing the cost of private bill legislation.

Mr Wharton, conservative, moved the address in reply to the Queen's speech, seconded by Colonel Duncan.

Mr. Gladstone said he rose to speak at
