(Rhone). The bodies of a young wo-man, aged twenty-four, and of her illegitimate child, three years old, were found in a well in the middle of a field. The body of the mother showed various stabs made with a knife, that of the child having also received several wounds caused by some sands of Boulognesur-Mer in the presence of many hundred spectators. He was a man of extraordinary strength, named Vigneron, aged forty five, and was known in most parts of Europe for his feats of strength, and particularly for lifting a cannon weighing six hundred pounds upon his shoulders and firing a full charge of guppewder. He went through this performance on the sands on Monday afternoon with his usual success, but while in the act of lifting the cannon to lower it he slipped and fell. The whole weight of the cannon fell on the face of the unfortunate man splitting his skull completely in two. Death, of course, was instantaneous. There was a very dramatic scene in the New York court room upon the sentence of Resenzweig, the abertionist, to seven years in the State Prison for causing the death of Miss Bowlsby, whose body was forming the trunk. It seems that the atmost sympathy is felt for the wife and daughter of the criminal, not-withstanding the fact that they are withstanding the fact that they are said to have been accomplies in the crime. They were greatly excited when the prisoner was taken out of the dock, the daughter Rosa, a girl about fourteen years of age, with a series of hysterical shricks, knelt on the matted floor of the prison box and shricked out, "Oh, may my Goo curse every one who went against you, tather; may their flesh rot from their boxes; may their hves wither up; may they die rotten. Oh, father if I die for it I'll have all their lives; if I die for it I'll have all their lives;" and then she clasped her arms around Rosen welg's neck and clung to him som misively; but even at this, the most trying some of all; Rosenzweig did not shed a tear; on the contrary, he locked his lips closely together and seemed the most unconcerned of any among the spectators.
