CRIES OF DISTRESS ALARM CITIZENS

Was Not a Murder But—Citizens of
O'Leary Street Will Now
Go Armed.

A GOOD ITEM SPOILED

The residents of O'Leary street were startled about midnight Sunday by screams of agony which seemed to emanate from the backyard of a house. At first the cries were feeble as if protesting against an attempted injury, but they soon grew so loud and terror-laden that sleepers leaped from their beds in an agony of fear. Horror-stricken they peered into the darkness in an endeavor to discover the cause of the dreadful screams, which grew more and more heart-rending. Surely some awful deed of blood and fury was being committed, someone being done to death in an awful fashion. Unable to contain themselves longer they armed themselves with various weapons and rushed forth to the rescue. The sight that met their gaze when they reached the location of the disturbance filled their valiant souls with rage and indignation and that right was two cats on a backyard fence.
