Two Men in a Boat.

ADRIFT TWO NIGHTS AND TWO DAYS.

Two fishermen, who had strayed from their vessel, were picked up and landed at Curling Thursday morning by the schooner Norwood. They were Thos. Wagg of Burin and John Miles of Gernish, and were fishing off Bay of Islands from the schooner Gordon M. Hollett, of Burin. Tuesday while setting their trawls they lost sight of their vessel owing to a storm which came on suddenly. All efforts to reach their vessel or land proved unsuccessful, and they remained adrift on the ocean without shelter from the storm and cold until Thursday morning, when they were picked up by Capt. Noel, who was on the way here from Bonne Bay. During the whole of that time the men were without food and water, and when picked up were in an almost exhausted condition. Capt. Noel did all he could for the strayed mariners, and after being landed here they were given the hospitality of the Tourist Hotel by its genial proprietor until the arrival of their vessel the following evening.—Western Star.

Used a Handcart.

Yesterday evening the police were arresting a disorderly character on Duckworth Street, and had much trouble with him. The man resisted so violently that some conveyance was found to be necessary to get him to the station. Seeing the hand cart of the Daily News near the office this was pressed into service and the prisoner was given a ride on it to the lock-up.

Mrs. A. Horwood, of Barter's Hill, left by the express yesterday to visit friends in Harbor Grace.

"They tell me," says Delaney, "that when they want to punish a man down South they tie him to a tree, and then all the flies surround him, and bite him till he is dead for sure."

"That yam," says Mrs. Tucker, "puts me in mind of a country not far from here, she's all tied up and the mosquitoes and flies, called heblers, are sucking the life's blood out of her; 'tis cruel but there seems to be no hope but to suck the last drop from her carcase. Pirates board ships and rob all and shoot the crew; heblers do all but shoot nobody, yet they inflict a torturing existence upon an unfortunate community who have to look at them and their twisting and their manoeuvring from one end of the year to the other."

"Insincerity is rampant in this age," says Tucker. "Why 't would do your heart good to meet a good solid man with the interest of his country at heart, men who are not straining both eyes looking for what they can haul out of the chest, and who are not watching rickety men to see how long more they'll be able to hang on to their Government job till they make a bee line to stow some of their relatives away in a good, strong position."

"Anyway," says Mrs. Tucker, "what can you expect? We have schools turning out 'high falutin' scholars and they must get a soft job somewhere, consequently a bee line is made on the Government, and if the candidate has pull enough, that is if his father made a good impression that he could influence people to vote the way he wanted the Government will fall in line and fire Absalom Astronomy into a nice soft job where he can put in his time trimming his nails and marking off the days on the calendar till pay day comes around."

"The country is reaping the whirlwind," says the Cute Man, "ye sowed the wind now ye can reap the whirlwind. It isn't much difference to me," says he, "but I'll tell ye that there's a change wanted round here. Why a few years ago if we had a few smart boys in one of our schools he or they were hied off to some soft job in the Government, either that or sent away to study doctoring; no one ever thought of putting his son to study up improving the way we conduct our fisheries or anything in that line. The result is that we have an army of boys all out for Government jobs, for the taste has become general, and everyone wants money for doing nothing or next to nothing."

Mrs. Cruickshank came in as we were discussing the subject, and to tell you the truth I was delighted. Mrs. Cruickshank just arrived at Tucker's on her annual visit to buy her spring stock. Mrs. Cruickshank is a first-rate kind of a woman providing she gets plenty of tea, good soft bread and a half-pound of cheese for her supper for nothing. Mrs. Cruickshank is one of those outboard people who are always inviting you "up her way" when she is lowering half-pints of tea, and forgets all about it when she gets home. When I look at Mrs. Cruickshank she puts me in mind of a trout-ing excursion we had "up her way." Everyone we met told us we'd get 'em for hauling just over there, but the over there didn't produce the extravagant promises that were held out, and so with Mrs. Cruickshank. She's a half-alow that's always going to do wonders when she gets you "up her way."

CRITICS

The physician who recommends, the patient who uses and the chemist who analyzes

Scott's Emulsion have established it as pre-eminently the best in purity, in perfection and in results.

No other preparation has stood such severe tests, such world-wide imitation and met with such popular and professional endorsement. To the babe, the child and the adult it gives pure blood, strength, solid flesh and vitality.

ALL DRUGGISTS

but when you arrive she either lost a goat or has gone picking bakeapples. Mrs. Cruickshank is sending in her two boys to go to college. Two fine, plump boys they are when they get planned down a bit and get their hair cut four or five times. Mrs. Cruickshank says they're twins, and that they're fourteen, come the thirtieth day of June. (But between me and you they look thirty). Anyhow, she says, she's going to give them a first-class education and also a chance to swing dumb bells for the crowd at the Annual Sports.

The Cute Man looked at the two soft-looking 'omadanns' (half fools in Irish) and tittered till Mrs. Cruickshank shot her eyes at him. The Cute Man is not disturbed by trifles and didn't pretend to mind Mrs. Cruickshank's sparkling gaze.

"Do I understand you rightly, mam," says he, "do I understand you're going to put these boys of yours in the college? because if you are I want to tell you that Goodridge's are looking for two strong men to ship to the fishery, and 't would be a great pity to have such material as your boys are composed of locked up in a short pair of white pants and getting burnt under a skull cap marching for the Governor on a dusty day in August when they could be hauling in money."

"Them days are gone," says Mrs. Cruickshank, "the people of the future in Newfoundland will live on talking about the fishery, and bringing in the vast resources from the lands, the fertile lands of the outports. Grain and wheat and dandelion, cows and sheep and weasels will be shipped in to the Capital. Young men will rise up and invent new industries; no one will so lower himself as to catch fish. We will sing pleasant songs and dance Highland flings round the stacks of corn in Bonavista Bay. Ship with Mr. Goodridge? Oh, not for Absalom, and I'm sure not for James, he's going to be a doctor, look at his high forehead. Look at it, surely you wouldn't have him go to Cape St. Mary's?"

The Cute Man eyed James, and with a smile like you'd give in church, nodded at Tucker and said "Good-night."

TIM SHANNAHAN.
Mr. W. D. Reid is expected to arrive here from New York about the 20th inst.
