Would You Stand By Him.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"Women are like the angels. Those who suffer belong to them."—Balzac.

"Should a woman still love her husband if he had been sent to prison for a serious crime? Should she stand by him and try to get him out?"

A reader friend sent me that question. We talked it over the other evening. There were many opinions on the different phases of the question.

Something Would Depend Upon His Innocence or Guilt.

In the first place, something would depend upon whether one believed that one's husband was guilty. If one believed in his innocence—and if his previous life justified me, I would certainly believe in it even though the evidence to the contrary were very strong—there would, of course, be no question as to whether one would continue to love him and stand by him.

Suppose, on the other hand, he were unquestionably guilty. Naturally one's attitude would be different. She Would Feel That He Needed Her More Than Ever.

The woman of the highest character would still stand by him. She would feel that in his weakness he had an ever greater claim on her strength than ever before.

But would she still love him? Ah, that's another question.

If the crime were a natural outcome of some recognized fault, which she had loved him in spite of, as for instance, some crime committed in a fit of temper, her love might not change.

If, on the other hand, the crime brought to light some unexpected and objectionable side of his character, he might become a different being to her and she might not love this new creature.

But Love Is Another Matter.

One might be well in love with Dr. Jekyll and not care for Mr. Hyde.

The Author-Man brought up a point which is interesting to note. In almost all the cases which occupy the first pages of our newspapers, the wives stand by their husbands until some other woman enters the case. Take the case of Dr. Peck, the dentist, who was accused of poisoning his father-in-law and mother-in-law, and tried to poison his wife. In spite of the most damning evidence, she stood by him until the other woman appeared.

Of course, in some criminal cases, the man is not mentally responsible. Then I suppose one would feel exactly as one would if one's husband became insane.

All these are guesses. What I should do or you would do, only actual experience would teach us.

Heaven keep us from ever knowing!

A Clever Bit of Work.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Please allow me space in your valuable Journal to refer to a very clever piece of detective work recently performed in this place by Constable Bishop, of Brigus.

The facts are as follows: During the past two months a resident of this place has been annoyed by some person or persons throwing stones on his house during the night. At one time going so far as to throw the stones through the bedroom window at twelve o'clock at night. At the time there were only two women in the house, and their terror can be easily imagined; in fact it had the effect of throwing one of the women into a fit from the effect of which she has not yet properly recovered.

The nocturnal visitations continued night after night, sometimes beginning as early as seven o'clock in the evening and continuing until two in the morning. The owner of the house with several neighbors night after night kept diligent watch but never succeeded in catching the person causing the annoyance. Matters were now so serious that it had to be referred to Inspector Sullivan who ordered Constable Bishop to make investigations. The Constable arrived on the scene without knowing the seriousness of the business; he was sent to investigate and came in his usual uniform, and of course in a short time every person in the place knew the business. The Constable came upon, which consequently made the difficulty of apprehending the offender very much greater. But the Constable is never better satisfied than when he has a particularly hard job to tackle, and he had not been in the place twenty-four hours before he had obtained sufficient evidence to convict the offender, who was brought before Judge Thompson yesterday.

The Constable is well known as a very clever detective, and in quite a few cases has shown himself a true disciple of Sherlock Holmes.

Yours truly,

Observer.

Taft Sees Spread of His Peace Idea.

Says English Leaders Are Turning Toward Suggestion of Enforcing It—Points To Duty Of U. S.

New York, Oct. 7.—That England seems to be coming to the scheme proposed by the American League to Enforce Peace to maintain the peace of the world after the present war, is the opinion of William H. Taft, the president of the organization who in discussing Viscount Bryce's article in the Manchester Guardian as reported in cable dispatches, said:

"Viscount Bryce's article, and especially the fact that the Manchester Guardian, the great provincial organ of Liberal opinion, has published a special number in which a large amount of space is devoted to the League to Enforce Peace, is one of the most hopeful things that have happened in the last two years. It shows in a convincing way that the thoughts of England's statesmen and leaders of opinion are turning toward the future; that they are anxiously considering what can be done after the war to prevent a recurrence of such suffering and calamities as Europe is enduring. The thought of the world is turning more and more definitely to America as the hope of the world, and this may be due to the propaganda of the League to Enforce Peace.

Fundamentals of the League.

"The league offers a definite program which does not go into details but is confined to these fundamental propositions:

"A league of nations to establish an international court to try causes of disputes between nations.

"A council of conciliation to compose differences that cannot properly be brought before the court.

"Conferences to formulate and codify rules of international law.

"Concerted use of economic pressure and military force by all the signatory Powers against any member nation that begins war or even threatens to begin war upon another member of the league without first submitting its grievance to court or council and awaiting a decision.

"Details are left to be worked out at the proposed international conferences thus avoiding the danger of shunting a great constructive scheme of international statesmanship off on a tangent and keep only fundamentals in view.

Duty of the United States

"One may reasonably question whether the United States by uniting with the other great Powers to prevent the recurrence of a future world war may not risk less in assuming the obligations of a member of the league than by refusing to become such a member in view of her worldwide interests. But even if the risk of war to the United States would be greater by entering the league than by staying out of it does not the United States have a duty as a member of the family of nations to do its part and run its necessary risk to make less probable the coming of such another war and such another disaster to the American race?

"We are the richest nation in the world, and in the sense of what we could do were we to make reasonable preparation we are the most powerful nation in the world. Viscount Bryce, Premier Asquith, in his significant utterance on August 23, and others have shown that they believe such a duty is imposed upon America, and that the nations of Europe are becoming more and more willing to co-operate in its fulfillment."

Infectious Disease On S. S. Florizel

What's The Matter With Our Quarantine Officer?

On arrival yesterday the S. S. Florizel was held up for examination, there being a case of measles on board, the sufferer being a sailor passenger named Gertrude Morrissey. She belonged to Harbor Grace, but had been residing in Boston for some time and was on her way home to her native land. When she joined the ship at Halifax the young lady was not noticed to be affected in any way, and it was during the passage from the latter port to St. John's that the disease first showed itself. Immediately Miss Morrissey was isolated as a precautionary step and attended by Furer Jones and Stewardess Mack for the remainder of the voyage. On reaching port the patient was brought to the Signal Hill Hospital for treatment.

Frequently complaints have been made about the Quarantine Port Officer and only yesterday afternoon when the S. S. Florizel arrived there was a spirit of dissatisfaction evident on all sides, owing to the absence of Dr. Campbell. The ship was not allowed to berth, passengers were disgusted, the Customs authorities were hampered in their work of examining the ship and all concerned were detained in their business for a considerable while, all waiting on "His Honor," who put in an appearance only through the efforts of Capt. Martin, who kept tooting the whistle of the Florizel continually.
