The Hardest Lesson.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"If a string is in a knot Patience will untie it. Patience will do many things, did you ever try it? If I were sold in any shop I should surely buy it. But you and I must buy our own, no other can supply it."

RUTH CAMERON

"And when can you hear?" I asked the Lady-who-always-knows-somewhat. She had just told me of a tremendously important letter which she knew by subsequent developments must have been lost in the mails. She had written and asked for a second letter and now she was waiting the results.

"Not for five days at the soonest," she said.

"You must be just crazy!"

"What good would that do?"

The Two Virtues One Learns With the Years.

"My dear," said the Lady-who-always-knows-somewhat with her gentle smile, "as one grows older there are two things one learns—patience and the power to put things out of our mind in these waiting times."

I didn't quite agree with her.

Those are surely two things one ought to learn if one doesn't want to be made miserable by the inevitabilities of life, but alas they are not things "one" always does learn.

I know at least one person who finds them very difficult lessons.

Impatience is Like Hunger.

Impatience is almost as primitive an instinct as hunger.

So also is the desire to worry over things when the issue is uncertain.

It is only the people who really grow and develop as they grow older who detach themselves to subdue these instincts.

Of course, with age there is a certain blunting of the edge of many things—worry and pain and happiness and impatience and all kinds of eagernesses.

But the control of an instinct is something more than its enfeeblement by age.

True patience is an active virtue not a mere dull acquiescence.

"They Also Serve—"

I often say over to myself when I am trying to teach myself to wait patiently and serenely, that beautiful line from Milton's "Ode On His Blindness"—"They also serve who only stand and wait."

Theodore Parker's, "I know what the trouble is, God isn't in a hurry and I am," also helps, especially when I am impatient about existing evils.

And just the other day in some of Mark Twain's recent letters I came upon a line that both amuses and helps. He had been writing about a puzzling mix-up in some lecture dates. He was pretending to scold about it most irritably and then he ended up with a funny little flash of sunshine:

"Now let's leave this thing to Providence for twenty-four hours, you bet it will come out all right."

Good advice, isn't it?

At the Yarmouth Y. M. C. A. Boys' Camp, held at Tuskett Falls in August, I found MINARD'S LINIMENT most beneficial for sun burn, an immediate relief for colic and toothache.

The Girl in the Office

VERY AGREEABLE CHANGES.

In this spring of 1917 the office that a year ago knew no relief from a monotonous aggregation of masculine morning suits and subdued colours is under the gentle stimulus of a mounting sun and the influx of women, a dazzling pattern of all the colours in the universe. We have become like the blouse-window in a Bond-street shop. But very much more so.

And all the tricks, the artifices, that experienced women employ so adroitly are utilized in the general scheme of attraction. But of that I say no more.

No longer does the acrid smell of tobacco smoke pervade my office. It is now fragrant with perfumes of expensive essences and distillations.

The modest lily of the valley, the violet, white heather, cherry-blossom, lavender—all these fight for the supremacy of the air. I mourn sometimes when these decoctions of the chemists in unholy alliance subjugate that divine fragrance issuing from newly plucked blossoms clinging to some sympathetic bosom. But I fear I am "singing the vision of May" untimely.

I can, however, lift my voice once more in praise of wonderful coiffures, of rippling hair that the sun seems to caress. Missie, on the right, has hair which would set the soul of a painter aflame. And Jones before she "joined up" used to sit there exhibiting a few dreary strands which clung to his scalp by force of will-power. What a contrast!

A commercial environment transformed since 1916! And a change that even a curmudgeonly fellow like me can appreciate and enjoy. These girls who have come to the aid of their country are of good courage and high spirits. They rob themselves in bright uniforms and the earth is glad. And when I hear them humming merrily a snatch from a song of the moment I forgive them the "art curtains" they have placed at my window and the use of my drinking-glass for their newly gathered blossoms.

True, I fear that one of these bright mornings all the office stools will have disappeared under flowery chintzes and that my ink carrier will be perched upon a woolly mat. And I expect to find photograph-frames on the desks in place of table calendars. (They are sure to ensue khaki-wearing figures.) But these are harmless anarchies. Nay, they are good for one. They brighten, exalt, and energise—and, thus have women solved the secret of success.

My fellow-scribes call my office "The Nest." Admittedly, it is becoming rather like a drawing-room. But the work goes on merrily. We are all seeking victory.

What matters it, then, if Cynthia troops in rather late in the morning, if Amelia is too much addicted to tea-drinking and admiring her pretty face in the mirror?

Vive Cynthia! Vive Amelia! And my devotions to Arabella. Vive la femme!

Strong Feeling in Japan

TOWARD MORE WAR ACTION.

London, June 5.—Private advices from British travellers in Japan report a strong and growing public sentiment there in favor of more active participation in the war on land as well as on sea.

The Japanese want to see the war ended as quickly as possible, and this desire for a fuller share in it has become accentuated since America's entry. Special circumstances have, in the natural course of events, enabled Japan to profit from the war; but the time has now come when her leading men are beginning to think peace is still more to be desired in every way.

If Japan should proffer military help, it would probably be readily accepted, but whether the desire that undoubtedly exists will take that shape cannot be said, at present, as the whole subject is still in a tentative stage.
