Mr. Fowler, who was then Secretary of the I reasury, rose twice and angrily protested that he could know nothing of such matters.

It is supposed, from the position he was lying in when discovered, that he stood before a mirror in his bedroom, placed the revolver to his right temple and pulled the trigger. The ball crashed through the brain and lodged against the opposite side of the skull. It is evident that the unfortunate man took his own life on account of business troubles. In Wellington a counter demonstration was organized, but it was a fiasco. When asked if he thought England was on the eve of a general election he replied: "I really cannot say. BIRCHELL'S COOLNESS.
NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., March 12.-Birchell's NIAGARAFALIS, Ont., March 12.—Birchell's behavior since the morning of his arrest is a marvel of callous indifference. And yet indifference seems hardly the word by which to express his extraordinary demeanor. His actions are more like those of a child, as if his intelligence had not yet matured and he had no realization of the awful shadow which is hanging about his head. Chief of Police Thomas Young, who made the arrest, says that he found Birchell in bed at the time. He was awake and had breakfasted with his wife in his room. When the Chief was admitted and announced his errand, the prisoner replied, "All right," as he might have said, "How d'ye do," and calmly, leisurely got up and completed his toilet. He did not utter another word, nor even ask the officer why he had been pounced upon. For three large heart in Chief Magistrate Hill's court other word, nor even as the control when had been pounced upon. For three days he sat in Chief Magistrate Hill's court room, during the Clifton preliminaries, without the slightest suspicion of concern depicted either in his manner or in his countenance. He laughed as heartily as updaying the court room when there was depicted either in his manner or in his countenance. He laughed as heartily as anybody in the court room when there was anything te laugh at, and while the witness (Hay) was looking keenly at him. During his hearing he amused himself by writing imaginary lines upon the air and examining his well-kept fingernails.
