Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works Tells of Ministerial Trip.

Various Industries on a Firm Basis--Full Confidence Restored.

After some three weeks absence in the Kootenays, Hon. R. M. Green, chief commissioner of lands and works, returned to the capital last night, and though feeling somewhat fatigued by much travel, nevertheless conversed pleasantly to a colonist representative who waited upon him shortly after the arrival of the Vancouver boat.

Yes, I have more confidence than ever, said Mr. Green, in the future of the Kootenays generally as an industrial centre and wealth producer. The ultimate goal is sure to be reached though the path may appear tedious at times, but present indications were never so bright nor opportunities so potent as at the present time. The steady demand for lumber products, potentialities of the fruit production and mineral wealth of this rich section of our province, must place it where it is destined to be--the premier section in West Kootenays, where.

The First Visit was made, there is a general feeling of stability and confidence. The heavy rain showers which fell shortly before I reached there did an immense amount of good to vegetable life, which had suffered somewhat by reason of the previous dry spell, as well as checked the forest fires which had begun to make their appearance, and as a consequence the scenery along the Arrow and Kootenay lakes, which is always beautiful, was very attractive.

The committee had practically sold the flour for $2.25 a barrel. I sold them that I did not propose that this flour, which had been donated for the relief of the poor, and which was valued at $4 per barrel, should be purchased for $2.25 in total for $2.25. The news of his death reached the capitol building at 9:30 o'clock, when it was filling for the day's work. Every arrival in the senate was met with the announcement that the venerable minority leader had shifted his care and found rest from the illness that had kept his seat in the senate vacant practically all of the present session. The announcement in nearly every case brought forth spontaneous eulogies such as are seldom given to any man, and especially to an intense partisan who had been a leader of a great party. The expressions were so unanimous in bespeaking the loveliness of the man, and his silence concerning the incidents of political strife, heard and silence, that it was a marked event in which he was held.
