OLD 73rd REGIMENT TO HAVE NEW NAME.

First Comprehensive Idea of Proposed Reorganization of Militia Units.

If present plans for the reorganization of the New Brunswick militia are carried out there will be a new infantry unit to be known as the 26th New Brunswick Regiment consisting of five battalions.

Thus the name of New Brunswick's only infantry unit in the Canadian corps will be perpetuated and the five existing militia battalions embraced. The latter will be known by numbers 1 to 5, according to their seniority, which is 6th, 7th, 13th, 14th and 22nd, so that the present 73rd Northumberland Regiment will become No. 3 Northumberland Battalion of the 26th New Brunswick Regiment.

The three batteries of field artillery will be known as Nos. 1, 2 and 3 Batteries of the 8th Field Artillery, thus perpetuating the New Brunswick unit of that branch of the service in the field known widely as "Anderson's Battery." The cavalry units, including the 8th, 14th and 28th Hussars and the P. E. I. Light Horse will be known as the Canadian Mounted Rifles, the 1st Brighton Engineers will retain their name under which they fought throughout the war, the Corps of Guides will merge with the Intelligence Corps, the C. A. M. G. will become affiliated with the 14th Field Ambulance, the Army Service Corps with the 2nd Divisional Train and so on with the various services.
