So the young girl was taken from her native forests, which only one white man ever entered, and introduced to the wondersights beyond, with its countless marvels, where she was to learn to read and live out her years. But one day the plans for Marinze's future were changed. Crampol received a commission to go to a part of Africa that no explorer had visited. It was believed that the influence of the wide-presed Pabanius extended there. No Africa that no explorer had visited. It was balieved that the influence of the widespread Pahouins extended there. No one knew what languages would be met, but the people probably understood Pahouin. Crampel needed a Pahouin interpreter. His mission political in its nature required celerity. The young girl, conning her French lessons, was an interpreter to his hand. Niarinza cheerfully turned her back on the life she had learned to love, happy to be of service to her kind benefactor; and the last their friends were ever to see of them was as they stood on deck waving their handkerchiefs when the ship bore them out of the harbor.

In August, 1890, the writer of this article received a letter from Carl Stoekelman, Loango, West Africa, announcing that Paul Crampel had arrived there with a large lot of trade goods to pay his way through the country. To all who asked whither he was bound he replied merely that he was not at liberty to divulge his plans. The white men he met could learn only that he was going to Brazzaville, on Stanley Pool, Geographers in Europe were as mystified as the traders on the coast; not until the explorer was far on his way did the facts about his mission become public.

Crampel had been instructed to ascend the Crampel had been instructed to ascend

He was to make treaties on the way with the various tribes, placing them under the protection of France, and, if theria and the dangerous inflammathem under the protection of France, and, if possible, he was to secure commercial treaties with the powerful Sultans of Wadai, Bagirmi and Bornu. In short, he represented France in the great race for Lake Tchad, in which France, Germany and England competed, though England alone recorded the goal. eached the goal.

Ill'luck and treachery involved the expedition in the most complete disaster that has ever befallen a peaceful African enterprise. When Crampel started northward from the Mabangi in January, 1891, he had 230 loads of merchandise and 78 porters. He was met at the outside by the impossibility of hiring men enough to carry his goods. All be could do was to instruct his four white assistants to move the goods northward as fast as possible, while he hurried on with twelve Senegal soldiers and forty porters in the hope of getting assistance to remove the remainder of his stores. He heard that in the north were Mohammedaus who could supply pack animals. These were the men who treacherously killed him. He had as a guide an Arab who had been released from a prison in Algeria to go with Crampel because he was familiar with a part of the country to be crossed. This traitor found means to send word to the Mohammedaus that Crampel was advancing in small force, means to send word to the Mohammedans that Crampel was advancing in small force, and would fall an easy pray. With treachery in his camp, food very scarce, his little band of porters depleted every week by desertions, Crampel's situation grew more desperate and that was the position of affairs when in April last year irretrievable disaster overtook the expedition.

Crampel, with Niarinze and the handful of men left to him, was among the Arabs El Kouti, in the southern part of Waidai. of El Kouti, in the southern part of waida. Biscarrat, with 25 porters and a part of the supplies, was about 100 miles south. Nesbout, with eight Senegalis, a few porters and some supplies was still further south. Messrs. Lauiere and Orsi, the other white members of the party, had died of fever. Crampel was received with the most friendly manifestations by the Mohammedans, who told him, however, that he must seek transportation further north. On the day that he renewed his journey came the beginning of the end.

A crowd of the apparently friendly Mohammedans suddenly overpowered and disarmed the Senegal soldiers. At the same moment another throng attacked Crampel and Mohammed-ben-Said, his arab interpreter, and stabbed them repeatedly with knives. Then as the dying man lay on the ground the Arabs shot them throng at the head. All their clothing was then stripped from their bodies, which arrat, with 25 porters and a part of the Crampel had been instructed to ascend the Congo and its greatest tributary, the Mobangi, to the most northern part of that river. Then he was to march overland about 700 miles to Lake Tchad, on the border the sudden and terrible foes of child-

One of them escaped and he tells this story of the part little Niarinze took in the fearful scene. He says that when the attack came, as unexpected as a thunderbolt on a sunny day, the young girl seized a gun, shot dead one of the men who was stabbing her master and a moment later she fell dead with a bullet through her body. Mr. Dybowski, who led the search exhibition, tells another story, which he believes is a true one. He says that all the native and Arab versions of the

Henry Allen to John J. Dickson & Co.: Little spirit has appeared in to-day's market. A few specialties have been strong but none have advanced materially. There has been firmness also in the genieral list, but the bull contingent has been indisposed to make much activity. As a matter of fact a pronounced bear feeling has lately been developed in the street, and within the last day or two some influential interests have been showing hesitation about continuing actively on the buils side. Some of the Western railroad men now here are distributing disquieting rumors. An interest close to Mr. Gould which is talking openly very bullish is distributing strong bear points in private conversation. More Rock Island bonds are hinted at. This is not very choer talking openly very bullish is distributing strong bear points in private conversation. More Rock Island bonds are hinted at. This is not very cheerful. An inspection 'of', St. Paul's stock book shows, it is said, less than 1900 shares of common stock in the names of the whole Vanderbilt family combined. Only a little while ago we heard that the Vanderbilts were in control. Chicago is beginning to show a little more interest in the market, and is bearish. Chicago Gas. puts are sold close to the market, and Wall-street does not construe this as bullish. Meanwhile money is easy. Railroad earnings are big; general business is brisk and most of the active factors in the business situation are encouraging. ESTABLISHED 1834 On Sherbourne and Linden-streets
