ADMINISTRATION FOR PUBLIC SAFETY.

Following the hold up in Montreal some days ago, which resulted in the stealing of about $172,000 and loss of lives of two men and wounds to several others engaged in the fray, comes a protest from the Canadian Manufacturers' Association against the franchise with which easy bail is granted to persons on trial for offences of a serious nature. It was shown in this Montreal case that one of the participants with a criminal record had been allowed bail a short time ago, had skipped to the U. S., and returned to participate in a hold up attended as stated above in loss of life.

The greatest deterrent to criminals is the certainty of punishment and one of the most obvious things to do after the malefactor or alleged malefactor is captured is to see that the amount of bail fits the nature of the offence charged and that in the more serious cases bail be not allowed at all. This procedure is followed in a great many cases and undoubtedly should be in all. The certainty of failing punishment while deterring those of known criminal record also keeps down the crop of potential criminals who are led on from one step to another deeper and deeper into the crime simply because they see that it is easy to transgress certain laws and then get away with it.

Why is it that crime has increased so much faster in the United States than in other civilized countries? Because punishment is so uncertain and relatively so seldom inflicted.

The carrying out of justice and the infliction of penalties for crime is not purely punitive by any means. There is the wider view of public interest as a whole to be taken. Laws firmly and impartially administered look after not merely this or that particular criminal but they save other people from developing criminal instincts and thus make the country better and safer to live in. A practice sometimes followed too generally is the giving of suspended sentence for offences of various kinds. There are doubtless cases where the very best results are secured and the person transgressing is never again found in the toils of the law. On the other hand too lenient administration actually encourages offences against person and property for the criminal inclined figures out that even if caught the result will be only a suspended sentence. Added to this he also pits his wits against the officers of the law that he will not even get caught. If worst comes to worst and a conviction follows sentence will be suspended. Thus where the practice of giving too many sentences of this class is followed the reflex effect on many who have not yet been haled into the courts is distinctly bad. Justice of course should be tempered with mercy but not too much so when the public are seriously affected.

THE PEOPLE'S MONEY.

Kansas City Star: It is beginning to penetrate to the popular understanding that Government isn't rich; that the only money Government has is what it collects from the people, and that when a member of Congress brings home an appropriation and presents it as a gift, the people are merely getting back a part of what they have paid out in taxes.

CLOSE SECRET

C.N.R. Board Decline to Make Public Salaries of Railway Officials.

Ottawa, Ont.—Canadian National Railway officials are entitled to the same degree of privacy regarding their salaries as obtains in any other part of the business world, the board of management of the railway suggests in declining to submit a list to be tabled in the House of Commons of all its employees receiving $4,000 a year or over in wages.

The list was asked for by A. J. Doucet, Conservative member for Kent, N. B., and the answer of the board was tabled in the House.

"ITALY'S-SUBLINE EGOISM"

Louisville Courier-Journal: Mussolini is pulling all the strings possible to make Italy a great empire on the Mediterranean. He has gone to all extremes, from giving aid to Kemal to seizing Corfu. He talks of national honor, but apparently there is no such thing as honor when the possible greatness of Italy is in question. It then becomes what former Premier Sonnino called "Italy's sub-line egoism."

THE SATISFACTORY SETTLER.

Springfield Republican: There is doubtless a relatively strong disposition on the part of many eastern Europeans to "burn their bridges" when they leave their native lands. Secretary Davis points out that the Jews have established the best record for permanent residence. The British, the Scandinavians and the Germans, on the other hand, seem to be more inclined to make their emigration experimental. . . . The Italians are almost in a class by themselves, many of them being essential nomads, encouraged by the government of their native country to go and come. Racial psychology and political and economic conditions unrelated to such basic elements as character, intelligence, racial affinity and so on need to be considered in judging the naturalization figures. It is not necessarily the alien most eager to become a citizen who would make the most desirable one.

REALITIES AND ILLUSIONS.

Natal Advertiser: British and Italian trade resumption with Russia is giving the French people themselves a vivid object lesson in the difference between the practical common sense of English politics and the windy abstractions of Gallic logic; while M. Poincaré's own chauvinism is steadily proving itself to be barren of offspring beyond the full-blown flowers of rhetoric that—like those other flowers that bloom in the spring—have nothing to do with the case. Time and his own detachment from the florid methods of his predecessors are all in Mr. MacDonald's favor in this duel with France; and his chief inspiration is to be drawn from the fact that he cannot possibly do worse than those who, with much wider experience and greater political backing, have already failed to move the pinch-been Man of Destiny sitting in the Quai d'Orsay.

GASOLINE TYRANNY.

London Daily News: That company (Anglo-Persian Oil Company) at present provides the only guarantee against the quite limitless exploitation of the greater part of the civilized world by two international oil combines—the Standard and the Shell—whose dominating purpose is manifestly to regulate world prices to the disadvantage of the consumer. Though, by comparison with these two gigantic trusts, the Anglo-Persian is a small affair, it commands nevertheless sufficient resources to harass the efforts of the others to establish a complete price monopoly, and the public of this country will now undoubtedly look to the Government to justify its reasons for retaining its shares by fighting the high-price conspiracy tooth and nail. It is only by common international action that a vast commercial threat of this nature can be destroyed or controlled in the common interest of mankind.

ARMS TRAFFIC IN CHINA.

Hong Kong Press: Arms and ammunition, destined to go into China surreptitiously, are constantly being seized by the police authorities on ships passing through Hong Kong from Europe, seldom, if ever, it must be said, on British ships—but what is discovered represents probably only a very small fraction of the quantity that is successfully smuggled into the country. It is not merely the military force of China—the hordes maintained by rival Tsuchans—that are armed, but in nearly all the provinces there are large organizations of bandits, thousands strong, who are armed with modern weapons, and almost every peaceful citizen nowadays deems it necessary to arm himself for self-protection against marauders. The traffic in arms and ammunition—both legitimate and illegitimate—must be on a colossal scale, and the situation in this respect today immeasurably increases the difficulties of the task of restoring peace in China.

SHIPPING HERE OPENS A MONTH AHEAD OF 1923.

The river is now practically free of ice. Two barges are loading gypsum, the Rotunda has commenced her regular schedule, the S. S. Glenholme docked on Tuesday, and a three-master is at the Government pier.

Shipping did not commence last year in the river until May 1st, when the S. S. Mons arrived from Digby, and the barge Daniel Munro came in to port.—Hants Journal.

NO TAXES IN BAHAMAS.

The Bahamas Islands are the only civilized parts of the world where taxes are unknown. Prohibition in the United States is responsible. Immense quantities of liquor are stored there in government warehouses for transportation to the United States by rum-runners. The revenue derived from these storage charges is more than sufficient to run the government.

CEREAL FOOD TO BE MANUFACTURED IN NOVA SCOTIA.

Nova Scotia is to add another manufacturing establishment to those she already possesses, providing also a market for probably 200,000 barrels of apples yearly. The new company which will manufacture Apple Krisp, a new brand of cereal food, to be known as the Apple Krisp Company Limited, will shortly be incorporated under the Nova Scotia Companies Act with a capital of $500,000. The head office of the Company will be at Kentville.

My Ma Paints She Does

And Misses Knozey come to our house and she says I dunno ma'am why you can do things like paintin' and such kindy loffy-like. And my Ma says, Dear me Mrs. Knozey if I couldn't do good as the men-folks how could I see that the men do as good as they'd oughter. And what's buying a little brush and laying, varnish or enamel on a chair back or round the tubs, or even doing the floor up fresh. Let's go to Magee and Charlton.

The fun I get out of it's most as much as the satisfaction of seein' things all bright and lovely. And I get to know just what's what about paintin' for I always talk it over with the man at the hardware store and he knows. I can depend on 'what he's tellin' me—and when the men come to do over our front porch and got through with what my Ma seen that they done it. I heard the boss feller say to the helper feller that My Ma paints she does, and buys all her paint, varnish and enamel at Magee and Charlton.

NON-EXISTENT HALIFAX INDUSTRIES.

Views of Fred W. Bowes in The Halifax Chronicle.

An interesting matter was emphasized last week in the Halifax Chronicle in an article by Fred W. Bowes showing that in the last forty years there have been many thriving industries in Halifax that are now non-existing because of the lack of local co-operation. The list might have been enlarged by the addition of the steamship line between Halifax and Boston and by various other commercial enterprises for the past the continuance of which would have meant much for the prosperity and commercial prestige and independence of the city and port. An important point in the discussion of such things which Mr. Bowes, strange as it may seem, has omitted, however, is that no very strenuous effort was ever made by any of them to identify themselves with the local market. If the history of the Halifax Cotton Mill, or Tosa-co Factory, or Sugar Refinery, or Soap Works, or Knitting Factory, or Shoe Factory were closely examined, it would not be found that they attempted to primarily grasp and retain the sales field and the confidence of their local trade. The cotton mill started on a manufacture which was pushed in all the other provinces as much as at home. Little or no effort was made to cater primarily to the customers in Nova Scotia and no money was spent to advertise the output as something that should be particularly used by Nova Scotians. The same was true of the Tobacco Factory. Does any one who remembers its operation recall any special advertising of its product or even the manufacture of any brand especially appreciated by local customers? Did Taylor's shoe factory ever advertise systematically and in a manner to arouse any local enthusiasm as to whether it remained or disappeared? The files of the provincial papers may be searched in vain for any evidence of effort to develop provincial interest in or admiration for such local enterprises. If a factory in Halifax today were to cater primarily and fundamentally and intelligently to its local trade then it could depend upon the people sticking to it, because Halifax factories enter the dim uncertainty of the world at large as a market and take their chances on getting a share of the local trade, they fall down when the world at large turns and eliminates them from outside competition. Lack of business push, fear of spending money in advertising and under valuation of the local market have been the causes of downfall of so many Halifax enterprises.

SPECTATOR.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Patterson Foster.

Mrs. Patterson Foster passed away at her home, Port Lorne, N. S., March 24th, age 69 years. Mrs. Foster was a member of the Port Lorne Baptist church and was ever in attendance when health permitted. She was active in all societies of the church, being teacher in the S. S., was one time president of the W. M. A. S., and held clerkship in the church for six years. She was the daughter of Ambrose Foster, Liverpool, Lunenburg Co., N. S., and was married to Patterson Foster, Nov. 23rd, 1876, by Rev. J. E. Blakney.

For four years she was a great sufferer and never complained, but patiently waited the call to go home. She was beloved and admired by all, and her christian character was truly beautiful. Her influence was ever healing and ever helpful.

Funeral services were held Wednesday 26th from her home and largely attended.

Floral tributes were: Broken Circle from family, Pillow of Roses from James and family, Spray of Roses and Carnations from son Charles, Spray of Lilies from nephew Percy Hatt. She leaves to mourn four sons, James of Boulder, Colorado; Charles of Smith's Cove, Reese of Conn.; Joseph of St. John, and three daughters, Mrs. Fred Milner, Port Lorne, N. S.; Mrs. Alfred Gay, Boston, Mrs. William Arbo, Fairville, N. B.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. D. W. Dixon, the text and scripture reading which was chosen by our late sister was Psalm 115. Text—Luke 52. She is not dead but sleeping.

She has left us here and gone to her home above.

The hearts of her loved ones are broken and sore.

For they miss the warmth of a mother's love.

But they know that her suffering and troubles are o'er.
