

M. Théroutin's French conversation classes commenced on December 1, at 7.30. We understand that they will be still more availed of after Christmas.

THE Ladies' College Aid Society had a very successful Magic Lantern night in the Hall. Such an exhibition depends largely upon three things:—The quality of the slides: the quality of the illuminating agent: the accompanying explanations. Without this last, we think most of the pleasure and profit of such an entertainment are lost. We believe that this one was a success under all the above heads.

WE are justly proud of our Football Team. For a resumé of their year's success see another column.

OUR pupils who are entitled to scholarships, prizes, etc., from the Council of Higher Education, have received formal notification of the same from the Registrar. Miss Meehan shows a keen sense of the fitness of things:—we noticed the addresses on the envelopes:—

John Forbes. Bsq. (Associate, observe).

Mr. W. Simpson (Senior).

Master John Tucker (Junior).

WE think that further consideration will show that two or three names have been omitted from these notifications. The omissions, however, are not the Registrar's.

WE are glad to notice how well Mr. Vatcher's pupils did in the last exams. It appears that out of eleven sent in, only one failed.

THE Ovid translations are really the work of three boys. The first half of the second selection is by A. Mews.

QUITE a number of subscribers owe for 1897. This is, we believe, a slip of the memory—50 cents in stamps will make this matter right; or better still, a dollar note will pay for 1897 and 1898.
