

of death and a dark future. When visited about twenty years ago by one of our laborers, he was induced to read again the once despised Bible, and received the truth as a child. Since that time his life has been a constant and dignified testimony to the power of the truth as it is in Jesus. The last ten years of his life have been a heavy cross of suffering. However, forgetting himself and with a feeling of gratitude to God for His grace toward him, his sympathizing and noble heart went out to seek the means of doing good to others. Many have found a new courage and a clearer faith in his sick room, where they could not fail to learn the lesson of patience and of long suffering. Such a life has been a great blessing in our midst. After his death were found among his papers written prayers, confessions and elevations of the soul to God, also a solemn consecration of himself to God. These were partly read at his funeral service. Some of his relatives, strict zealous Roman Catholics who attended his funeral service and who until now could not be approached on the subject of religion, were surprised and moved to tears when they heard what had been his inner life, and the stay of his soul during the long years of bodily pain, and of moral suffering on account of the bigoted opposition of his relatives to his new religious convictions.

By his will he left a legacy of $400, to the Grand Ligne Mission as a mark of generous gratitude for what it had done to him.

FELLER INSTITUTE, LONGUEUIL.

The scholastic year of this establishment closed last May with very satisfactory public examinations. Four Model and seven Elementary school diplomas were taken by the pupils. A few of the former pupils were engaged in teaching during the year. One of them, Miss Lore, who has been for several years a dutiful and successful student, has become an assistant teacher in the Institute. When the school reopened in October last, seventy-five had made application for admission. Forty-two were received, coming from twenty-five different localities in Canada and the United States. Twenty-eight of them are entirely new pupils. The branches taught are the same as last year—French and English Grammar, Bible Studies and Sacred History, History of Canada, Arithmetic, Composition and Drawing. In the Normal school department, besides Geometry and Algebra, Book-keeping—the
