For a man of eighty-seven years of age a widow, one son, Charles, the North climb to the top of a staging fully ry feet from the ground, is by no means brothers and two sisters to mourn their an ordinary feat, yet this was done recently by J. De Wolfe Spurr.

Some repairs were about to be made to Mr. Spurr's house and to accomplish the work it was necessary to erect a staging.

This done, Mr. Spurr thought he would like to make a personal inspection, and, in company with the contractor accord.

George Beattie in company with the contractor, ascend-ed the ladders to the very top of the scaffolding, which, as already stated brought
