FIRMLY BELIEVES HE IS CHOSEN A PROPHET

Wealthy Michigan Farmer Persuaded of His Resurrection in 500 Years.

DETROIT, Mich., May 15--Preparing for the resurrection, to take place 500 years after he has been laid in his grave, which, he believes, will bring him forth a prophet of the Lord, Henry Lyman, a retired farmer, has started the erection of a massive sepulchre on his farm, one mile south of Twin Lake, Mich.

Bright and healthy in every way despite his 65 years, Lyman is a crank on the subject. Firmly possessed of the belief that he is destined to be a prophet, his resurrection after 500 years in the tomb is to him a matter of course.

Henry Lyman is wealthy and childless. He lives alone on his 240-acre farm, but has made provision so that when he dies his demise will be known. Unless he is buried exactly as the terms of his will set out, certain persons will not receive the large sums of money otherwise bequeathed to them, the provisions of the document making any contest in court equivalent to a forfeiture of the interest of that party in the inheritance.

In his will he asks to have his body placed after death in the tomb he is now building, the remains to be interred, the grave being dug only deep enough to allow a covering of only one inch of earth over the body, leaving the face exposed. His clothes are then to be hung up on the walls and the sepulchre sealed.

After 500 years, Lyman says, he will come forth in the flowing robes of a twenty-fifth century prophet.

REFORMED DESPERADO TRYING FOR PARDON

Man, Whose Romance Duplicates January Cacc, Wants to Live Right.

JACKSON, Mich., May 15--Stirred by President Roosevelt's announcement of his intention to pardon William J. Jauray, the westerner who has been called "the modern Jean Valjean," friends of John Allison, a prisoner in the penitentiary here, are striving hard to have the man pardoned, and he will make formal application for release next week.

Allison's case is a duplicate of the romance revealed by the arrest of January in Kansas City. Allison was a member of the Lake Erie gang, which spread terror through southern Michigan, northern Ohio and Indiana in 1898 by their robberies.

In 1899 he, with three other members of the gang, was captured and convicted of robbing the Richland, Mich., bank. He was given a seventeen-year sentence. In 1904, while repairs were being made in the institution he escaped.

Allison went to Illinois, took a new name and went to work as a mechanic. He married Mrs. Wagner, a widow with four children, without disclosing his past. Months later, just before the birth of their baby, he told the story to his wife, who said that they would try to forget it.

Just before last Christmas the mechanic at work in the plow works at Moline, Ill., was recognized as the escaped convict and was arrested. He was immediately returned to the prison here. By working overtime in the prison hammer shop, Allison is able to earn from $10 to $20 per month, which is given his wife for her support.

Allison's sympathizers, among whom are his employers at Moline and Governor Warner of Michigan, believe he deserves pardon as much as January, his prototype, and it is very likely he will get it.

DEFEAT IN ART IS NOT ABIDING

Rudyard Kipling Talks of the Unsuccessful

Quotes Words of Solomon, "Nor Yet Favor to Men of Skill, But Time and Chance Happeneth to Them All."

LONDON, May 15--Rudyard Kipling presiding over the meeting of the Artists' Benevolent Institution, and speaking to a toast to the institution, made some remarks concerning artists and their work, which have been quoted throughout the country. Kipling quoted Solomon's "Nor yet favor to men of skill, but time and chance happeneth to them all," and went on to say, "Solomon was a generous patron of the arts and the original man of letters. Nobody has improved on his remark and you may have noticed that nobody has improved on the state of affairs that gave rise to it. There must be as many men nowadays as there were in Solomon's time whose skill has not found favor in an enlightened democratic age like ours. It is impossible to say that if a man's skill has not found favor, the blame must lie with the man, or the skill. This is a pretty doctrine. I wish I could subscribe to it myself. There are, however, men who devote their skill in producing things expressing ideas for which the public have no present need. Being artists these men must needs do the work laid upon them to do, and while they are doing it, they are apt to overlook a number of important worldly considerations. No one embraces a career of art with a direct idea of making money. The material rewards of art are often so small that men may be forgiven if they sacrifice themselves and their belongings to make an appeal to the next generation while they forget their own."

"Besides these there are the others whose skill, however much they may desire it, has not found favor. Time has not given them their chance. Their skill has not found favor and by the world's verdict they have not achieved success. The world's verdict, of course, is of great financial value. The verdict of their fellow-craftsmen is a little nearer the facts of the case."

COUNT THEM AS FRIENDS.

"Thank goodness we all count among our friends delightful men and women whose skill has not found favor, but to whose skill, sympathy, humor, and above all, knowledge, we owe more than we realize. It may be that the very generosity of soul which impels them to lavish themselves so unstintingly upon their associates has stood in the way of their more evident advancement and that some of these good spirits are now facing, I won't say defeat, for there is no lasting defeat in art, but an outer appearance of defeat. Time and chance are as uncontrollable a base of impressionists as ever there were. They are rather brutal in their methods, but gladly sure in their effects."

Kipling then referred to cases he had assisted in the past year. They included want, disease, breakdown, madness, and death. He added: "Your imagination can fill in the background, and talking of imagination, do you know the black thought, gentlemen? I am loath to remind you of it in this fenced, pleasant place, but it is the one emotion that all men of imagination have in common. It is a horror of the great darkness that drops upon a man unbidden and drives him to think lucidly and connectedly, with Crickshank, detail of all the accidents whereby through no fault of his own he may be cut off from his work and forced to leave those he loves defenceless in the world. You know the black thought gentlemen. It possesses some men in the dead of night, some in the sunshine, some when they are setting their palettes, some when they are stropping their razors, but very few of us are exempt."

Referring again to cases he had assisted, Kipling said: "We have only heard the bullets of time and change; these others have had to stop them with their bodies."

EXCITEMENT OF PARTY KILLS OLD MILLIONAIRE

Pittsburg Man Dies When Reception He Insisted on Draws Near.

PITTSBURG, May 15--Excitement over an approaching social function, which he had insisted on his children giving, caused the death of Robert Jenkins, Sr., 80 years old, yesterday. Jenkins was the first coal operator in the Pittsburgh district, and retired with a fortune of several million dollars.

With his son, Robert Jenkins, Jr., and two daughters, Jennie and Marion, he lived at 4222 Center avenue. The younger members of the family were prominent in Pittsburg society until four years ago, when the ill-health of the father caused them to give up social affairs.

This did not please the old man, and, saying that he wanted to be shown that he was not in the way, he insisted that they hold a reception. Last week 400 invitations were sent out for a reception at the Jenkins home next Wednesday afternoon.

When the acceptances began to pour in from the ultra-fashionables the old man became so excited that he succumbed to an attack of heart disease.

BLOOD WAS SUCKED FROM HIS BODY

Life Dragged Through Artery Under the Terrific Pressure of 400 Pounds to Square Inch.

CHICAGO, May 15--Walter Hunter, engineer for Armour and Co., met his death on Friday in an unheard of manner, when his blood was almost instantly drawn from his body by suction pressure of 400 pounds to the square inch in a refrigerator pipe on the roof of the Armour power plant at the stock yards.

Physicians who examined the body declare that no similar case of violent death had ever come to their attention. Hunter's life having been literally dragged from him by the resistless suction power, just as air would be drawn from a vessel by a vacuum pump.

Hunter had been sent to repair a leak in a pipe through which the water runs from the refrigerating machinery to the reservoir. The enormous suction pressure in the pipe is believed to have drawn his leg into one of the pipes, where he was found dead five minutes after he had ascended to the roof. Examination disclosed that his blood had been drained through the shattered arteries of his leg, which was destroyed by the terrific suction force, a power greater than is utilized to drive the swiftest locomotive.

HOW WE DO CHANGE!
"Ah!" exclaimed Mr. Jellus, "Been traumas another man's picture all these years, hey?"
"Not exactly," answered his better half, "That's a photo taken of you, dear, when you had hair."

The old man lived at 4222 Center avenue. The younger members of the family were prominent in Pittsburg society until four years ago, when the ill-health of the father caused them to give up social affairs.
