

FOUGHT TO THE DEATH ON TOP OF OVERTURNED CANOE

In Love With the Same Girl, Two Young Men of Nipigon, Ont., Engaged in Hand to Hand Struggle After Paddling Out Into Lake --- Fisherman and Daughter Watched Combat.

(Special to the Sun.)
FORT WILLIAM, May 17.—As the result of a feud which had its inception in Nipigon, a small town sixty miles east of Fort William, W. A. Armstrong and Isadore Bouchard, formerly employed on the projected line of the transcontinental railway, are dead in Helen Lake on the north shore of Lake Superior. Armstrong and Bouchard were drowned last Tuesday and their deaths were without exception the most tragic that ever occurred in this district. While in a canoe half a mile from shore the men engaged in a combat, clamping the craft. Undaunted, they climbed to the top of the overturned canoe and engaged in a hand to hand struggle lasting nearly thirty minutes, when, their strength spent, they slipped into the water and sank. Some weeks ago Armstrong and Bouchard became involved in a quarrel over a girl, and ever since "bad blood"

CARTWRIGHT OFFERS PLAN FOR REFORM OF SENATE

Should Have More Power and be More Equally Divided --- Provinces Should Choose 48 Members and Government 24 --- Commons and Whole Political System Needs Reform.

(Special to the Sun.)
OTTAWA, Ont., May 17.—The senate furnished the feature of today's parliamentary proceedings. Sir Richard Cartwright made a speech on the preparation of which he had evidently spent a great deal of time and thought. He advised the reform of the whole political system, both house and senate.
The charges against the senate, he said, were varied, but the chief complaint was that the senate was an expensive and not altogether necessary body. A careful examination, Sir Richard thought, might show that there were other parts of the constitutional machinery that stood as much in need of oiling and repairing as did the senate.
Sir Richard said he was prepared to affirm that whatever the senate's capacity for good was there was no doubt as to its capacity for mischief. He had had experience in a government with a hostile senate majority against him, he could testify to this. The question of senate reform was largely academic. That was the way in which he had proposed to discuss it. He wanted it understood that he was speaking not for the government, but for himself, and that he reserved the right to change or modify the opinion that he was about to utter. It was a question that should be discussed frankly.

TO EQUALIZE PARTY REPRESENTATION.

He thought the remedy for failure to give the minority proper representation in the house might be found in grouping constituencies and having that were now three, four or five constituencies return representatives by applying the principle of one man, one vote to the groups. Sir Richard had been forty years in public life, but did not think conditions had improved or that they would improve until there was a fair representation of both as to the groups. SHOULD HAVE MORE POWER.

If it was to reach proper usefulness, the senate should have more power of the legislative work assigned to it and it should have more power. Though its theoretical power was considerable, the practical power was small. If the age limit was changed, it should be changed in both directions. If eighty was too old for senatorial usefulness, thirty was too young for senatorial discretion. As to the reform in the character of the representation, Sir Richard thought that at least a third of the membership should be men who had experience as cabinet ministers in either government as lieutenant-governors, as provincial premiers, as judges, and if these sources did not furnish enough men, for membership of the house of commons. These men should be enforced with a special legal element. He could see no reason why the senate should not be given the monopoly of the greater portion of the private legislation which was now principally dealt with in the house.

ONE THAT CAN BE USED IN "FOOD CURE."

A man may get try all sorts of drugs to help him to get well, but after all the "food cure" is the method intended by Nature.
Anyone can prove the efficacy of the food cure by making use of the following breakfast each morning for fifteen or twenty days:
A dish containing not more than four heaping teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts food, enough good, rich cream to go with it, some raw or cooked fruit, not more than two slices of wheat bread, and not more than one cup of Postum Food Coffee, to be "food cure" is the method intended by Nature.
Let one meal in the day consist of an abundance of good meat, potato, and one other vegetable.
This method will quickly prove the value of the selection of the right kind of food to rebuild the body and replace the lost tissue which is destroyed every day and must be made up, or disease of some sort enters in. This is an age of specialists, and the above suggestions are given by a specialist in food values, dietetics and hygiene.
