Business Outlook is Improving

All signs point to a general revival of trade in both Canada and the United States. A day or two ago it was announced that there were numerous indications of a return of prosperity in the United States. On the basis of data collected from a number of American manufacturers, it was estimated that about five hundred thousand employees would be added to the present working forces in the industries of the United States. This revival of trade will have a stimulating effect upon the business in this country as the financial depression in the United States was felt in Canada during the past year.

There are numerous indications also that the clouds are missing from the financial horizon in Canada. Reports from the West show that the good crop there this season have had

From a Woman's Point of View

"As a matchmaker there is nothing to excel the brother" I read recently, and it brought to my mind the experience of a young woman friend of mine whose brother, age 7, has been exceedingly anxious for her to wed. The reason was not hard to guess for, jokingly, the sister had answered all his appeals for a pony by saying, "Just you wait until I marry a rich man, Bessie, and then I will buy you one."

The parsonage of the church, of which Bessie's father was the pastor, was on a city street, on which were comfortable but comparatively modest homes. In the middle of the block, however, was one very handsome residence of stone and surrounded by beautiful grounds. This place seemed palatial to Bessie, and his father had at one time told him, in response to his questionings, that it was, no doubt, owned by a very rich man.

After being as patient as he could for some weeks after his big sister's conditional promise the little fellow decided to take things in his own hands. One day, soon after the family in the big house had returned from a trip to Florida, the butler was surprised when he answered a ring at the door to be confronted by a very cheeked little boy, who demanded:—"Is the rich man in, please?" "Who?" ejaculated the astonished butler, and the youngster only repeated impatiently, "the rich man is who I want to see."

"Well, he isn't home," said the butler with a broad grin, "but the rich lady is." And then he sent for his mistress, who was greatly amused. "Why do you want to see the 'rich man' little one?" she asked, and he replied frankly: "I want him to marry my sister, she says when she marries a rich man she will buy me a pony."

"Just wait until he comes in, and we will ask him about it," said the woman kindly, shaking her head at her brother, who was not successful in his efforts to keep his face straight. Bessie had a fine time that afternoon. His hostess allowed him to gaze for at least an hour at a glass aquarium of baby alligators from Florida, and when the "rich man" finally returned home, and Bessie had an audience regarding his matrimonial enterprise, the rich man volunteered to escort him home, and great was the surprise of his father and big sister when they heard of his venture.

"You were so slow, sister, and I wanted my pony," he said.

The rich man explained that he could not marry the sister, having a wife already, but, in the same breath urged Bessie to accept instead of the pony a little bull terrier puppy, and the youngster was allowed to do so, on condition that he would try no more matchmaking on his sister's behalf.

There is no doubt that a girl's brothers can do more for her in the match making line than the most wisely scheming mother.

The girl with a brother is certain

In Favored Canada

Statistics of wealth, of population, of agricultural output, of trade and commerce, in a word, of the material prosperity of the nation, are all very well in their place, but they are not thanksgiving, and are not to be regarded as the only or even the chief cause for national gratitude.

Canada's great and abounding material prosperity, the people of Canada have reason for heartfelt thankfulness to the Giver of all good things; but a material measure of that gratitude cannot be made, nor can it be given expression fully and adequately in words merely. Of all the blessings of this life probably the greatest are the least recognized. For all the best recognition and thanksgiving is not the occasional special service of praise and gratitude, but the all-the-year-around contented, happy and kindly disposition.

The observance of Thanksgiving Day as an annual festival we have from the neighboring Republic. It is an observance that comes directly from the Puritans. Those stern men, iconoclasts as they were, having abandoned the celebration of Christmas and Easter and the other old religious festivals, found themselves led by their Scriptures to establish a day, when then the harvest had been gathered in, wherein they might eat of the fruit of their labor and rejoice in the many mercies and deliverances with which they had been favored. But they certainly did not invent the harvest festival. Since men learned to sow seed and reap the harvest they have not failed to rejoice in the day of their abundance, often in more or less wanton fashion, but never without recognition in some fashion of the power that "did good and gave us rain from Heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness."

Never has our country had greater reason for thankfulness to Providence than at the present time. The sun and the rains have done well by men from end to end of this broad Dominion; the forces of Nature have given the fruits of the earth, and abundantly. The year has not been without its visitations of misfortune, notably the terrible forest fires which have wrought so great havoc; but for much that may be regarded as blindly doing, we may offset more that is ing and assuring. Canada is her share in the work of bettering the conditions of human life.

There is a continual proplift, which gives us ground and faith; and while we e our faces turned hopefully faith to the future, we have an abundance for thanksgiving esent.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Then the sister is a young lady. Still, that anybody should fall in love with her, strikes her as absurd, if it strikes him at all. At last the truth dawns upon him and he resents it. "Just you wait until I marry a rich man, Bessie, and then I will buy you one."

She is unaware of it herself, and perhaps, elated at being chosen when other girls apparently as attractive are passed by.

"We always call these the 'grape mornings' at our house," declared a business man the other day. "My wife always defines the seasons so exactly by the fruit we have for breakfast. We have our berries and melons in summer, our oranges and grape fruit in winter, but we all enjoy our 'grape mornings' in the last part of September and October more than any."

Medicines Must be Labeled After First of April

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—It has been decided that the act of last session respecting the sale of patent medicines shall come into force on the first of April. After that date any preparation which contains chloroform, acetone, opium, strychnine or any other of a numerous list of deadly drugs will have to be approved of by the experts of the department of inland revenue or will have to bear a printed statement on the outside of each package that there is a deadly drug within the preparation and the name of the drug. It was the intention of the department to have the act made effective as soon as possible, but it has been found that the application of the law will require some time. This is due to the fact that there are over twenty-five hundred druggists in Canada, and every one of them makes and sells one or more preparations in the form of cough medicines or soothing syrups, and all of the formulas have to be submitted to the government analysts and passed upon before their sale can be authorized or forbidden.

REQUIRES TIME
This work requires a great deal of time. It is understood that the policy of the department of inland revenue will be to interpret the law strictly and that the only patent preparations which will be authorized will be those which contain no deadly drugs of those which contain such drugs in such small quantities that they are not dangerous.

Many of the druggists throughout the country have already sent in statements of their preparations and the officials are working upon them at the present time.

Many cases of heart trouble are caused by reflex disturbances. Derangements of the stomach and liver produce symptoms of heart trouble. Catarrh of the stomach is a very frequent cause of sympathetic heart disease. Irritation, shortness of breath and tingling after meals are the most prominent symptoms.

Such a condition of the stomach is also liable to produce headaches of the worst sort. Medicines that palliate the symptoms will never lead to a cure. It is the effect which Ferrus has upon the stomach, healing the mucous membrane and restoring the natural function of the stomach, that causes Ferrus to bring such prompt relief.

HEADACHE, WEAKNESS, HEART TROUBLE

"I Suffered With for Years—Pe-ru-na Cured Me Entirely."

Miss Alberta Chauvin, No. 37 Rue Agnes, St. Henri, Montreal, Can., writes: "I consider Ferrus better than any other remedy, as it cured me when nothing else could. I suffered for years and years with heart trouble, headache and weakness. I never expected to find anything to cure me. I saw one day, in 'La Presse,' that Ferrus was excellent and I tried it. One bottle produced a change in me and if the price had been $100 a bottle I would have paid it gladly. I have taken six bottles and am entirely cured. Please accept my thanks and best wishes for your Ferrus."
