NEW BRUNSWICK.

About three months ago Her Royal Highness The Duchess of Connaught was informed that it was the desire of the women of Canada to present to her, on the occasion of her departure, some token of their deep appreciation of her active interest in all that concerns the welfare of this country. Her Royal Highness decided that she could not accept a personal gift under present circumstances.

It was then suggested to Her Royal Highness that in memory of her association with Canada, a fund might be raised for some patriotic purpose connected with the war. Her Royal Highness thought it unwise to add to the numerous funds now being raised. The earnest wish of Canadian womanhood to commemorate her departure in some worthy manner having again been brought to the attention of Her Royal Highness, she has consented to allow us to supplement her Prisoners of War Fund. It seems to us that this would be a most fitting farewell gift. We all know the generous way in which Her Royal Highness has identified herself with the affairs of the Canadian people and her deep and active interest in our well-being, and the well-being of our men on active service, as well as those in need of the necessities of life in German prisons.

Will the women of New Brunswick kindly make an effort to give as generously as possible to this fund, as it not only means the comfort of our prisoners, but as well testifies to our affectionate regard for Her Royal Highness.

Contributions must be sent in before the 12th of October, addressed to Mrs. Josiah Wood, Government House, Sackville, N. B.

INTERESTING CONTESTS

"Paper" Contest

How many different kinds of paper do you think there are? Here are a few: Newspaper, scrap-paper, brown-paper, and sand-paper. Now you try and make a long list of them all, in your best writing, and to the boy or girl who sends me in the longest, correct list, I shall award a Boy's Watch, or a Girl's Beautiful Bracelet. Each attempt must have the usual coupon attached, and reach this office not later than October 4th, 1916, addressed to

UNCLE DICK,
THE STANDARD,
ST. JOHN, N. B.

In the event of a tie handwriting will be taken into consideration, and Uncle Dick's decision must be considered as final.

A Question Contest

A Pretty Fancy Work Set, as first prize for a girl, and a splendid Camera as the first prize for a boy, and here is what you have to do to try and be the lucky winner of either. Answer the following questions the best way you can, writing them on a piece of paper in your very best handwriting:

- No. 1—Give the name of a city in Europe, beginning with P and ending with D.
- No. 2—What city in the States has W Y in the middle of the name?
- No. 3—What city are the Russians trying to capture, which has C at the beginning of the name?
- No. 4—Name a town in Canada which makes you think of a great soldier.
- No. 5—What country has the first letter of the alphabet at the beginning and at the end of its name?
- No. 6—What river in Europe has T at the beginning of the name and ends in the North-Sea?

In the event of a tie, neatness of writing will be taken into consideration. The prizes as stated will be a Pretty Fancy Work Set, for the most correct and neatest list received from a girl, and a Splendid Camera goes to the boy whose answers are the most correct and best written.

All entries must have the usual coupon attached, and reach this office not later than September 27th, addressed to

TODAY'S LITTLE JOKE.

The Neglected Trousers.

Little Willie wore his dad's clothes, which his mother cut down for him as best she could. As little Willie was getting in to a vest that had been cut down from an overcoat he began to growl and grumble. "What's the matter now?" said his dad. "Why," said Willie, "this here pocket ain't got no bottom in it." "Pocket be darned!" said his dad. "That's a buttonhole."

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS.

THE COMPETITION.

Maxwell had already piled four useful looking boxes up in a column and was now returning with a chair, also borrowed from the grocer. The next moment, Nicholls understood his rival's plan—Maxwell had mounted his chair on the top of the boxes, had seated himself on it, and was "casting" into the river again. At the moment of discovery Nicholls made another one. Maxwell had solved his own shadow problem, but in doing so had created one for Nicholls. Nicholls' favorite spot on the river was now useless, because grotesque reflections of the highly perched Maxwell would have started a crab away. "No, you don't Maxwell!"

"Don't—what?"

"You aren't going to sit up there," cried Nicholls. "The river isn't yours, and—keep still, man!"

Nicholls hissed the last command, breathed quickly, and was within an arm's length of the greatest triumph of his angling career.

The famous old trout was tackling his bait.

At this same instant, three or four village fellows stepped on the bridge and Maxwell turned to look at them. The result was far-reaching.

Maxwell's shadow threw a dark patch in front of the trout, and the fish darted aside, while Maxwell yelled like a Red Indian. In his heart he knew he would have landed the fish but for Maxwell's shadow; and, well, Nicholls couldn't think clearly about anything else. He ran to the bridge just as Maxwell thought he had the chance of a lifetime in bringing the famous old trout's career to an end.

Even now Maxwell solemnly declares the trout was in the very act of falling a prey to him, but it was not to be. Nicholls seized the second of the pile of boxes and shook it violently.

"Come down, Maxwell," he cried, and to add emphasis to the command, he put his foot to the bottom box and his back against the bridge rail and pushed. "Come down at once!"

Maxwell did come down, not so much because his rival demanded a descent, as on account of the boxes collapsing. Maxwell's chair tilted back on its hind legs, the startled angler waded his fishing rod vaguely in the air and made a convulsive grasp at nothing in particular with the other hand, then the incident was over.

Maxwell descended to the bridge at a rapid rate, and had not the four village youngsters been there to break his fall, the descent might have ended painfully.

As it was, Maxwell didn't stop to consider whether he were hurt or not, but at once commenced to storm at Nicholls. Nicholls stormed back, and it was at that point that a sudden shout of triumph went up from some one farther down the river bank.

It was rather a high pitched yell which suggested that a Third Form pair of lungs was responsible for it. Maxwell and Nicholls stopped their heated argument and listened.

The Prize.

"Hooray—hooray!"

It was young Ramsay who had given the sudden shout of triumph, but it was scarcely to be wondered at. He had got a "bite" at last and the fish was the famous old trout.

Ramsay knew it the instant he "hooked" his prey, and the few seconds which followed were amongst the most exciting in the fish's life. He had succeeded where Mr. Beaumont and other well-known anglers had failed, and the knowledge almost took Ramsay's breath away.

The old trout gave splendid "play," too, but he was caught at last. In the greatest excitement Ramsay landed his catch, removed the hook and put the magnificent fish in his basket. The way it squirmed and jumped astounded the fish, but that could not be helped. The guinea prize was won, and Ramsay rushed recklessly back to get his coat and the rest of his tackle.

Maxwell and Nicholls looked at him inquiringly.

"What's the excitement, young Ramsay?" asked the former.

"Caught a tadpole, or something?" (Continued tomorrow.)

Who's Who and What's What in the Picture World and on the Stage—Favorites and What They Say and Do.

Mabel Taliaferro—who is starred in

"Snowbird" at the Imperial today has the distinction of being the first recognized stage star in America to appear in motion pictures. This was when she played the title role in "Cinderella" with the Selig forces.

She returned to the spoken stage for a short period on several occasions since then but her best work has been on the screen. She will be remembered by theatregoers for her excellent performance in "Polly of the Circus," "Springtime," "The New Henrietta," and as "Lovey Mary" in "The Wages of the Cabbage Patch." She also appeared in Shaw's "You Never Can Tell," "In the Bishop's Carriage," and scores of other well known plays.

Miss Taliaferro was not only the first American star in pictures but she was the first Metro-Rolle star, appearing in the stellar role of "The Three of Us." Previous to "The Snowbird," she was seen on the Metro programme in "Her Great Price." She has a big following all over the country, for she has never had a failure on either the speaking stage or on the screen.

Eddie Polo, who will be seen again in the "Liberty" serial at the Opera House tomorrow, before he joined the Universal Company, was an acrobat with Barnum & Bailey's circus, where he was a high diver, acrobat, animal trainer and parachute dropper. He was born in Italy and all his life has been doing daring stunts. In Paris he dropped from the top of the Eiffel Tower in a parachute. He also claims to be the only man who has ever caught a fellow acrobat after a triple somersault in the air. As an underwater swimmer Polo also stars, having accomplished the feat of swimming 385 feet under water without coming to the surface for air.

CURTAIN FLASHES.

Anita King, "The Paramount Girl," was the first girl to cross the country in an automobile unaccompanied, this feat having been accomplished during the fall of 1915, when she stopped at nearly eleven hundred Paramount theatres in the different towns en route, telling the story of better pictures, for better theatres, and a better theatre going public, the foundation upon which Paramount is built.

This beautiful young actress has become one of the "city beauties" of Los Angeles, caring for the destitute girls who crossed the continent in an endeavor to become motion picture actresses and failed, only to be left alone without proper funds and without the requisites to earn a livelihood.

This work is being lauded not only in the community in which she is doing it, but all over the country.

Mme. Petrova, the Metro star, used her beautiful country home near Flushing, L. I., for many of the scenes in "Extraneous," the big five-part Metro feature now in production. While the players were at work there, Mme. Petrova entertained her leading man, Arthur Hoops, and her director, Burton King, at luncheon. Mme. Petrova brought her parrot and her blue Persian cat, Sultana, to town to "work in the set."

A motion picture camera designed especially for amateur use is being made by the Kinak Motion Picture Company of New York City. It is meant to fill the demand for moving picture films in the home and school.

The films used are made from paper and are claimed to be easier to handle and safer. In projection they give a picture three by four feet in size.

Little Boy Nine Months Old HAD DYSENTERY

Dysentery is one of the worst forms of bowel complaint. The pains in the bowels become intense, the discharges are with great rapidity, and are very often accompanied by blood, and the sufferer becomes very weak and languid.

Unless these discharges are checked, death may ensue in a very short time.

There is only one remedy to use in all cases of dysentery, and that is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It will cure when all other remedies fail.

Mrs. J. Leslie McKee, Redvers, Sask., writes: "I used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for my little boy when he was about nine months old. He was awfully bad with dysentery. I had not laid him down for three days and nights until when his father took him for a few minutes. He had both the diarrhoea and vomiting. I had tried everything until my husband got 'Dr. Fowler's,' and three doses cured him."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the remedy you want. Don't take any other when you ask for it. Manufactured only by the T. M. M. Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price 35c.
