But we shall take an instance or two at random. Mrs. Maria Jolly, of Wortham, Ling, Nortolk, writes: "For fifty years I had suffered indescribable agony from dyspepsia, nervousness, asthma, cough, flatulency, spasms, sickness at the stomach, and copious vomiting." She was crippled through weakness and infirmity and she adds, "Sufferings were so and infirmity and she adds, "Sufferings were so so awiul (from flatulency, &c.) that I have many a time prayed for death as a happy deliverance." This sufferer to the astonishment of all her friends," was restored to health and sound sleep by the use of the food and she states that since her recovery she tried it with similar happy effects upon a little girl of seven years of age, who had been suffering fearfully with an eruption of the skin, large white lumps, itching dreadfully, the skin, large white lamps, itching dreaduly, and making her cry with pain." Miss Elizabeth Yerman, of Gateacre, near Liverpool, testifies to a similar cure of "ten years dyspepsia and nervous irritability, which had rendered life a perfect burden to her," and for which she had vainly tried "the best medical advice, bleeding and blistering, and au astonishing amount
