The love that lifts them out of themselves and glorifies the humblest home is gone or has forever passed them by; hence the unhappy, disappointed faces one sees on every side. Roosevelt's Name.

The Americans appear to have considerable difficulty in pronoun in the name of their President. Accord ing to one paper they have at least fourteen different ways, including Rosa-felt, Rooze-velt, Ruzy-veld, Rooze-vell and Ruza-felt. We cannot very well laugh at the Americans, as we have had our own difficulties with a certain ex-president whom some people to this day per sist in calling "Kroojer." It is a libel upon the English people, however, to suggest, as is done in the paper referred to, that a few million of them think the President of the United States is a Boer. The Germans, we are told, think of him as a Jew, while the French regard him as a German, especially since he talled fluently in that language with Prince Henry. President. Roosevelt must be satisfied with the reflection that there are other names quite as often spronounced as his own, such, for instance as Goethe and Pepys and even Sophocles, whom but to-day we heard rhyming with "monocles." London Chronicle,

A Story of Tissot.

An interesting story is told of Jaclues Tissot, the great French painter, lately deceased. While in England he painted a beautiful religious picture, and meeting a countrywoman asked her opinion of his work. "It is a chef d'oeuvre," she replied, giving a remarkably just and detailed appreciation of the various merits of the painting. "Are you satisfied?" asked a friend. Tissot answered in the negative. He entirely repainted his picture, working night and day. When finished he sent again for his fair critic, who pronounced it "admirable," and remained silently admiring it with smiling criticism. "Are you satisfied?" asked his friend again when the lady had departed. "No." answered the artist, and set to work for the third time. When the Parisienne saw the new painting she gazed at it for some moments with evident emetion and then without a word sank softly to her knees and began to pray. "Are you satisfied now?" whispered the friend. And Tissot said, "Yes "-London Tatler.

Trees Affect Soil Temperatures. That this is true has been proved by many experiments in this country. In South Australia, some observations showed that the temperature of the soil in a forest was 21 per cent, lower than in the open field and that the air temperature in the forest was 10 per cent. lower, The effect of forests in thus equaliz ing the extreme summer heat is thus demonstrated.

The Winter Layer.

The good summer layer is the good winter layer when the conditions can be controlled. A good, warm house, with plenty of grain and an abundant supply of green feed, with a small quantity of meet and bone and plenty of grit and shell, will produce eggs if the hens can be made to exercise enough to keep in good health and with good appetites.
