Judge Hoke and Sandy Bend Justice

He Tells of the Case of Steve Taylor and How It Had Thred His Soul.

[Copyright, 1906, by R. Douglas.]
"I wish to explain to this crowd," said Judge Hoke of Sandy Bend as court was duly opened, "that I'm not feeling well today. I'm feeling homesick; I'm feeling lonesome; I'm feeling as if there was nuthin' more to live for on this terrestrial globe of ours. I won't deny that as I sat in the Red Dog saloon half an hour since (the Red Dog belongs to this yere court and is the leadin' saloon for a hundred miles around) that was tears in my eyes, and I wondered if the reputation which old Wyoming has been a hundred years in buildin' up was to go to smash in a day.

"GIT OFF'N YER CRITTER AND HOLD UP YER HANDS!"

"My friends, I have seen men and women die. I have seen innocent babies have a fit and go allin' away on angels' wings. I have seen the lightnin' bolt tear down mountains and the awful cyclone level forests. I have heard a Digger Indian who had been bit by a rattlesnake call upon heaven to save him, and I have seen a Chinee-man who had taken carbolic acid writhe upon the ground like a serpent. I have held the hand of an old man as he died, and I have smoothed the brow of a woman as the death rattle sounded in her throat.

"Don't let any human byways in this courtroom make a mistake on me. For twenty years I've been a resident of Sandy Bend, doin' my level best to uphold the honor and dignity of this sovereign commonwealth. For the last five years I've been a justice of the peace in and for the four counties of Ace High, Crippled Dog, Blind Hoss and Hell Bent, and I reckon you'll all agree that my great object has been to uphold the glorious reputation left behind by our forefathers. I've not only been keener to mete out justice, but to let all my decisions redound to the credit of the goddess with a handkerchief over her eyes and a pair of scales in her hands.

"What happened three days ago? Gentlemen, gaze on Steve Taylor over there and let your souls wonder if such things can be in this enlightened century; also, gaze on Bill Whiting, on the other hand, and let them same souls of y' play tag around this courtroom and bring up all a-standin' again the front door. Steve Taylor has been among us for two years. He carries two guns, and he has given everybody to understand that the 'leven notches cut into the stock represented the 'leven men he removed from this 'wilden dwellin' in New Mexico. I can't say that any of us have been afraid of him, but we have gazed on those notches and been sorter keener not to graze him with our elbows as we passed. When he has asked for credit at the Red Dog I have smilingly given it to him; not because I thought he'd 'ever square' up, but because I didn't want to seem to doubt his story about them 'leven men sleepin' under the side of a distant territory.

"On one occasion, and that wasn't long ago, when Steve was one in a five handed game of poker and raked in a big pot on what he said was a straight, some of us knew that he was mistaken. It wasn't that we was afraid that we didn't tell him so, but he seemed so happy that night that we concluded not to upset him.

"As to Bill Whiting, he's been hangin' around for only a few months, but he was sized up from the very first as a chump and a dub. Is that anybody present in this courtroom who hasn't give him the boot? Is that a Chinee-man in this town who hasn't bounced him around? If your gorge rises and your souls palpitate as you look the pair over I shan't blame you.

"Steve Taylor travels the rest of the night on foot, headed for Sandy Bend. He arrives here at 8 o'clock yesterday mornin' and calls at the Red Dog saloon to wake me up and to say: 'Judge Hoke, I want justice.'

"What sort o' justice? says I, wonderin' if I'd heard aright. 'The reg'lar sort. I've been held up by Bill Whiting and robbed of my all, and I want him punished by the law.' 'Think of it! Think of it!' groaned the judge as he looked around the courtroom. 'A man as has been held up by a man with a stick, as has had chance after chance of gettin' hold of his guns again, as knowned Bill Whiting for a chump, to come to me and holler for justice! If 10,000 of ye leave this territory tomorrow with shame and humiliation in your faces I shan't blame ye. I struggled with Steve for an hour. I made him understand what was at stake, but it was no use. He wanted justice and nuthin' else, and I issued a warrant for Bill, and the constable bring him in last night. He's sittin' here before us as peart as a jackass rabbit on a June mornin', and from that grin on his face I'm judgin' that he means to plead guilty. How is it, Bill?'

"I held him up and went through him right 'nuff." 'Just listen to that! Was ever such a thing heard of on the face of this arth before?'

"He pleads guilty, your honor," murmured the victim.

What have you got for those youngsters?

—with their keen, hearty appetites. Why not give them Paterson's

Butter-Cream Soda Biscuits?

Healthy boys and girls always know what's good to eat.

There are forty crackers in every pound of Paterson's which proves they are crisp and good. The children know they are better than anything else in the cupboard.

These famous crackers are as crisp as pie-crust and a thousand times more wholesome. Have them on hand for the children always.

Your grocer has them in the red box. Be sure you get Paterson's Butter-Creams.

Take nothing else. We say they are the best biscuits made—and you'll say so, too, after one trial. Always a little better than any other crackers.

The One Autostrat.
The umpire is a mighty man;
He always has his say,
And when he once decides a point
It has to be that way.

Although the world with threats and jeer
May contradict him flat,
He triumphs over all his foes
By simply standing pat.

The statesman and the business man
Tell you in proper pride,
But never know just where they stand
Until the courts decide.

Be the umpire, headless of
Ambition or of self,
Walk with imperious stride through
Life
A law unto himself.

—Washington Star.

For the Stomach
Heart and Kidneys

Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a Cause
Cure—not a Symptom Cure.

It is a common mistake to take artificial digesters for stomach troubles—or heart stimulants for weak hearts—or kidney remedies for diseased kidneys. These organs do not act separately of their own accord—they have no independent existence—and not once in 80 times is the sickness the fault of the organ. It is the kidneys which control the organs, and only through the kidneys can the body be kept in health.

AN ALUMINUM FAMINE.

Only Three Sources of Supply At the Present Time.

The world is suffering at present from an aluminum famine, according to a report to the department of commerce and labor, there are at present but three sources of supply—an American company operating at Niagara Falls, a British company at the Falls of Foyer and the Neuhausen works in Switzerland. There has been a rapid increase in the use of the metal with the sudden expansion of the automobile trade, and the market price of ingots is nominally $80 a ton, or $200 more than last July. But this quotation is purely nominal, because there is hope of the metal to be had. The conditions in the United States were aggravated by a strike, and when the American contractor tried to copy in the English and European markets they found there was none of the metal to be had.

Aluminum has come into very general use in automobile construction as well as in many parts of engine work. It is used by large factories for cooling pots and pans of all sorts and is capable of use in almost any place where brass has been used, having in addition to other desirable qualities, about one-third the weight of brass. The wire is used in this country now for the transmission of electricity for power and light, the cables from New York to Niagara being of this metal. But this development has not yet been taken up abroad.

A Worm That Chews Iron.

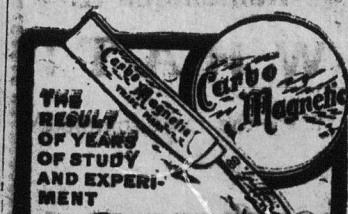

Some years ago the engineers employed on the railway at Hagan, in Germany, were puzzled by accidents which always occurred at the same place. The Government sent a commission to the spot. It was not, however, until six months when the insect on the surface of the rails appeared to be corroded as if by acid to the extent of over a hundred yards. The rail was taken up and broken, when it was found to be literally honeycombed by a tiny, threadlike gray worm. The insect is about two centimeters in length and about the size of a small knitting needle. On the head are two little sacs or glands, filled with a most powerful corrosive secretion, which is ejected every ten minutes when the insect is lying undisturbed. This liquid when squirted upon iron renders that metal soft and spongy and of the color of rust, when it is easily and greedily eaten by the little insect—London Engineering.
