quest Was Adjourned For One Week Last Night.

Toronto, Sept. 23 .- After hearing evidence as to the reception of the body from the authorities of Niagara Falls, 1., the inquest on the body of the female child, with the murder of which Mrs. Mabel Turner stands chargwas adjourned last night for a week by Chief Coroner, Arthur Jukes

In the meantime the police investigations have resulted in the obtaining of much important on the case. The authorities are also looking into cases in which it is alleged Mrs. Turner adopted children who cannot be located.

Mr. T. L. Monahan appeared on behalf of the Crown last night, and after the jury had been empanueled and viewed the body Detective W. Wallace was called and gave evidence as to his bringing the body of the poor little mite to Toronto.

Before he commenced his formal hearing the Coroner inquired whether Mrs. Turner was in attendance and rehearing the Coroner inquired whether Mrs. Turner was in attendance and represented by counsel. The Acting Crown Attorney mentioned that Mr. T. C. Robinette, K. C., was representing the prisoner, but was not in attendance, and represented by counsel. The Acting Crown Attorney mentioned that Mr. T. C. Robinette, K. C., was representing the prisoner, but was not in attendance, and then Mrs. Turner was brought into the room. She sauntered in, but while there might be indifference in her walk, the fact told a story of approciation of the terrible charge which has been laid against her. Tall, and of good figure, she was clothed entirely in white.

Detective Wallace told how he received, from the authorities of Niagara Falls, N. Y., the body of a child which had been exhumed, and which had already been declared by a United States court to have been strangled and its body, in all probability, thrown from a New York Central train at a point about three miles from the Falls.

"Any questions:" asked the Coroner of Mrs. Turner.

"I am waiting for my lawyer," replied Mrs. Turner wearily, and again

The Coroner then declared that he did not intend to take any further evidence at the sitting, and in view of the fact that a number of witnesses had to be brought from a distance the inquest was adjourned for a week.

A woman told Inspector of Detectives of Mrs. Turner at a certain house in the city. These children have disappeared, but, according to the information, Mrs. Turner had explained their absence by saying she had placed them in various homes and institutions. Apparently, the inquirers had been satisfied with these explanations

Detectives Wallage and Kennedy were instructed to inquire the story, but Inspector Dunean ned to make known the result of their work.

During the past few days a number of excited women have called at the detective office with stories about adopted children that they imagined might have come to harm, and the three detectives who have been assigned to special duty on the case have been kept busy tracing children given out for adoption. One of the most interesting developments of the case yesterday was the discovery by the police that the child found in the Wood attreet house after the arrest of Mrs. Tureet house after the arrest of Mrs. Tur eet house after the arrest of Mrs. Turis not the infant named King that the infant taken from the hospital can only be imagined. An interesting fact about the Wood street baby is that it has been offered a home by a kind-hearted Toronto woman who has no children of her own.

Yesterday the shoe box in which the body of the murdered Authers infant was found near Niagara Falls was shown to a clerk in a downtown shoe store and identified as one that had been used to box up a pair of boots sold to a Mrs. "Miller" on Monday, September 13, the day before the infant was strangled. When the box in which the body was wrapped was inspected it was found to have been made of two shoe boxes fastened together, one apparently having proven too small for the gruesome contents. One of these boxes was old and was without distinguishing marks, but the other bore a shoe firm's private number. Everything else had been rubbed off, with the exception of the opening letters of "Wood" street. With this number as a cine the police finally learned that a certain store had a bill of sale and a drivers' recipt, showing that this box had been delivered to Mrs. "Miller" at the house on Wood street.

The police believe that the throwing of the body from the New York Central train was not in accordance with the plan Mrs. Turner is alleged to have made. The intention was evidently to get rid of the parcel on the steamer going across to Niagara Falls, but, meeting acquaintances on the boat, she had to change her plan. Coming back to Toronto, she apparently become afraid of again being unable to dispose of her parcel on the train window down over the cliffs. But for the fact that a flagman saw the parcel thrown out and crawled down the cliff out of curiosity to see what it was, the murder would in all probability never have been discovered.

72 Days of Dish Washing

You spend two hours every day washing dishes. That's 720 hours a year or 72 days of ten working hours each. This means that half the time is wasted. For with Taylor's Borax Soap you finish your work in one hour instead of two.

Isn't it worth five cents to have 36 days a year to yourself-to have cleaner and sweeter dishes than ever before with less than half

Jaylor's Soap

This wonderful soap is unlike any other you have ever known. It digs into the corners of dishes and loosens the dirt almost like magic. It cuts away grease and leaves the surface clean and polished.

Hard water makes fiard dish washing, but Taylor's Borax Soap softens the hards sate water and so makes the work easy. But it does more than soften the water—it softens the hands and leaves them even whiter than before.

With this soap you save all the bother of rubbing and most of the scouring. You simply have no idea of the work this soap can save—it is the greatest surprise you have ever known. The glassware has a lustre that fairly sparkles with brilliance. The china ware looks as fresh and inviting as new. Yet you work only half as hard with this astonishing soap. No soap could be purer than this, for during the boiling process we run thousands of gallons of clean water through the soap. Thus every impurity is carried away and the soap is absolutely clean.

Borax also sterilizes and sweetens. It kills every germ and leaves no possibility of contagion. It destroys all odors and leaves a clean scent that is simply delightful.

Invited to Lecture Before Royal Scottish Geographical Society.

Truro, N. S., Sept. 22.-Commander Robert E. Peary had no further statements to make to-day regarding the polar controversy, and while travelling westward to his home in Eagle Bay from Sydney spent the time going over his correspondence. The explorer, with his family, left Sydney early to-day and reached Truro to-night. Later the Peary reached Truro to-night. Later the Peary party departed for Portland.

The trip to Truro occupied the entire day, and at the stations en route groups of people gathered to catch a glimpse of the explorer. While crossing the Canso Strait on the transfer steamer Scotia, Commander Peary went to the bridge, where he was photographed. Commander Peary received by cable an invitation to lecture before the Royal Scottish Geographical Society.

An enthusiastic crowd, which had gathered at New Glasgow to enliven the departure of two wedding couples, cheered Commander Peary and threw rice at his car windows. The explorer was given a round of applause when he appeared on the platform, thinking that the demonstration was in his honor alone, but he hastily retreated when he observed that he were in the middle of the party of the tree of the platform.

The explorer, accompanied by his wife and family, with a score of newspaper correspondents, left Sydney, N. S., at 7 o'clock, and will reach Portland, Maine, to-morrow evening. The explorer expects to spend a few days at Eagle Island, making up his reports and preparing a statement on the question, "Has Cook been at the pole?" He said he did not think it would be long before the statement was made public.

COOK SHOWED NOTE BOOK.

Fully 30,000 Words He Says Were Entered in North.

Says the Controversy With Peary is Now Closed.

Why He Maintained Secrecy When Leaving Annatok.

New York, Sept. 22.-Dr. Frederick A. Cook, about 4 o'clock greeted a parlor filled with forty New York and European correspondents, and had questions fired at him for fully an hour and a

At all times the explorer frankly answered the question asked, of if he felt so disposed, frankly replied-especially when anything in the nature of a Peary-Cook controversy was broached—that he did not wish to answer the question.

He would not acknowledge any en mity toward Peary, but his attitude indicated that deep down there is no love lost between the two explorers.

"Will you tell why you imposed secrecy upon Whitney and young Pritchard?" Dr. Cook was asked as an onener.

chard?" Dr. Cook was asked as an opener.

"Because," he answered, "I didn't think I was bound for any reason to give the nature of my expedition and work to Mr. Peary or anyone else. Naturally I had a pardonable pride and a perfect right, I may add, to announce my achieverent to the world myself. Mr. Whitney, who should be back here by the middle of October, will be at liberty then, and is at liberty now, to give all the information he possesses."

Dr. Cook said that when he left his records with Mr. Whitney he did not have any understanding with him as to when he was to return. As for Pritcherd, Dr. Cook said that it was quite by accident that he (Cook) found out that Pritchard had overheard his aumouncement to Whitney that he had been to the Pole.

WHY SECRECY WAS MAINTAINED.

"When I was leaving Argatok," Dr.
Cook explained, "to go down by sledge to Upernavik, young Pritchard asked me to mail a letter to his mother. I did not distrust Mr. Whitney, but to be sure that no word of niy work would reach civilization until I was ready to give it forth myself, I asked Pritchard to open the letter before I undertook to mail it for him. As he read the letter over to me I learned that he knew of my discovery and was sending the news home. Therefore I made him cut out that part of the letter and asked him to maintain secrecy." WHY SECRECY WAS MAINTAINED.

"In Bo's'n Murphy's case I had little to fear. Murphy can neither read nor write. I tried to take all precautions to prevent my discovery anticipating me to civilization."

prevent my discovery anticipating me to civilization."

Dr. Cook's only reply to the charges made by Peary's companion. Matt. Housen, that the Cook Eskimos had told Hensen he had gone only "two sleeps' north-from land, was a succinet. "Ask Hensen to explain that." "The Eskimos," he added, had been cautioned by him, and doubtless were still obeying instructions.

"Furthermore," volunteered the doctor, "I shall produce my Eskimos here for you to question yourselves. I'll have an interpreter on hand, and you may question them all you like. Mr. Peary is not in a position to challenge me. I feel sure scientists will agree that my records and instruments will prove my assertions. I already have given the world as much—I think a great deal more, in fact—than is usually given forth during the first few days or weeks by any explorer. Now I shall turn over my records to science. I can do no more."

PEARY-COOK INCIDENT CLOSED. PEARY-COOK INCIDENT CLOSED.
Dr. Cook here was asked about the truth of his alleged statement that he feared to remain at Etah because of the possibility of a disastrous meeting with Peary. He had never made such a statement, said the explorer, and just at this point he put his foot down and blocked the trend the questions were taking.
"So far as I am concerned," Dr. Cook said positively, "the Peary-Cook incident is closed. Mr. Peary has no right to dictate my affairs, and I have no right to interfere with him. That is my last work on that phase of the subject."

Dr. Cook was asked whether he could Dr. Cook was asked whether he could have reached Denmark carlier than he did after the discovery if he had remained with Whitney and waited for a ship. "I doubt it," he began, with hesitation. "I don't think—oh, cut it out," he said, with a slight show of irritation, the only display of the kind he made during the interview." I could—not."

"When you were still 460 miles from the pole and you sent your last sup-porting party south, how were you pro-visioned?"

porting party south, how were you provisioned?"

"I had provisions enough left," he answered, "for myself, the two Eskimos and two dogs to last eighty days. I then had two sledges and 26 dogs for this last stage of the journey. I counted, of course, on feeding dogs to dogs. We left land with 11 sledges, 103 dogs and 11 Eskimos. We got back to Greenland with no dogs and only half a sledge. During those last days we not only at times had to feed our sleeping bags, but parts of our clothing to the last of the dogs."

Dr. Cook said he had managed his 80-day supply of food so that it lasted mearer 30 days.

A POSER ANSWERED.

What looked like a poser was put to Dr. Cook when he was asked about the What looked like a poser was put to Dr. Cook when he was asked about the seeming discrepancy of his published statement, "The night of April 7 was made notable by the swinging of the sun at midnight over the northern ice. Our observations on April 6th placed our camp at latitude 86 degrees, 36 minutes." Astronomers say that the midnight sun was first visible in that latitude on April 1 and that if Dr. Cook saw it first on April 7, he must have been 550 miles from the pole instead of the 234 claimed, and that therefore to reach the pole by April 2.1 he would have to race at a 35-mile a day gait. "That merely brings up the point I've so often tried to make," replied the explorer a bit wearily.

"Questioners ask things without seeing my records, and besides, they misquote me. I never have said that I saw the midnight sun first on April 7. I merely said that I had seen it that night. Besides, even if I had said I had seen it first on the 7th, that would be automobile corps in connection with the Ottawa mitiia. physically possible. For a week or two the horizon had been murky, and obscured with low-hanging, smoky frost mist. Anyway, I was not taking observations at midnight."

"May we see some of the notes you made while wintering in the north?" Dr. Cook was asked. He had just told in his concluding remarks of the interview something about his underground winter quarters, and of the writing he had done there as a preliminary to the reports, and his book soon to be published. Dr. Cook hesitated for a moment, and then arose.

Cook hesitated for a moment, and then arose.

"Yes," he said, "I'll show you some of the writing I did in the north," and he hurried up to his apartments with his secretary to get his notebooks.

In a few minutes he was back with one of the books, and as he flipped through the small pages, filled with marvelously minute pencil writing, somehow, you felt that here was something tangible, almost like a splinter of the pole itself.

Dr. Cook gave no one a chance to read carefully any of the pages.

The doctor answered promptly and easily almost all of the questions.

Grandfather.

Belleville, Sept. 22.-The reason for Belleville, Sept. 22.—The reason for the mysterious disappearance of Stewart C. McMullen, the young Sidney farmer who left the city so suddenly over a week ago, was partially cleared up to-day, when his recent actions were discovered. As stated, he was in sole charge of the farm of his grandfather, John Connolly, an aged man and invalid, and had charge of all the funds. He did the banking for the old man, but, it is alleged, instead of depositing to the credit of the latter he placed the money in his own name.
