A SERIES OF LETTERS.

A series of letters is now being addressed to His Royal Highness the Prince Consort, by Dr. John Campbell, Editor of the British Standard, and Ensign. in regard to the education of His Royal Highness the important sentiments, and are written in a bold, elo quent, and manly style, will, we have no doubt, be read with deep interest throughout the British Isles, and still more widely. All sincere and intelligent Protestants must feel grateful to the writer for the valuable service must feel grateful to the writer for the valuable service which he has done to a cause so dear to them. The proper training of an individual, even in the lowest rank, is of no little consequence; but that of a person who is destined to occupy a very exalted position in society is of still greater importance. It is searcely possible for us to estimate the importance of the ducation of a prince who is the Heirannercut of the great. of a prince who is the Heir-apparent of the greatest throne in the world.

The author of these letters calls the attention of His Royal Highness to Lord Bolingbroke's celebrated work.

"The Idea of a Patriot King," which, he says, "ought to be intensely studied by every Prince of the Royal Family, from age to age." The intention of Lord Bolingbroke is to draw the portrait of a model Sovereign; and this is signally accomplished as far as can be effected without the religious element. This, as Bolingbroke was not himself a christian is wanting in step would be premature. But they would have his in the meantime a Romanist under a Protestant gar. They would work him up into a thorough Tractaria. Thus he would be enabled under the semblance of Protestant and the recention.

"But some are heard at the eleventh hour."

"I know it. But my eleventh hour was when I had that call! It was the last."

"Not the last. You are called now."

"Doctor," and they young man, the dark shadows gathering upon his face, and unutterable, indescribable hopeleaness settling down upon his features—"Doctor," and there was a pause; then he said slowly and with great emphasis, "I have missed it at last."

This was said with such a tone and expression of deapondence as no language can describe He looked all round the room, as if carnestly yet vainly soulting for some desired object; then burying his face in his pillow, exclaimed, in an agony which rang with a grean through all the house—"O?I have missed it?"

So he died. "Now," continued the speaker, "I know that there are some awakened young men in this room. I know the Holy Spirit of God is striving with some south here. Ho is urging to repentance, to faith in Christ—to "msking your calling and election sure." Sin not against the voice of conveience—sin not against the offer of eternal life—lest finally you be compelled to exclaim, in flat despair, as did the young man who died last night—"I have missed it at last!"

It was a young man who was speaking. His appeal seemed to reach many a heart. There was a moment of solems stillness, and then arose the voice of conveience—sin not against the offer of eternal life—lest finally you be compelled to exclaim, in flat despair, as did the young man who died last night—"I have missed it at last!"

R was a young man who was speaking. His appeal seemed to reach many a heart. There was a moment of solems stillness, and then arose the voice of earnest prayer that no awakened sinner present might procreatinate a single moment, and thus misimprove the golden opportunity to make his peace with God.

We counted, and in the Eusign, to the attention of the letters, which are published in the British Standard, and in the Eusign, to the attention of the letters, which are published in the British Standard, and in the Eusign, t

The union in Australia is working well. The second General Assembly has been held and was atended by eighty ministers and olders. It receives ministers from each of the three great Presbyterian bodies in Scotland, who require only to be qualified and to sign its standards. What Christian wisdom have the brethren shown in bringing about this Union! What infatuation would a contrary policy exhibit! Will not British North America speedily follow the example of Australia.—Colonial Presbyterian.

"If ever there was a land in which work is to be done, and perhaps much to seffer, it is here. I shall not say too much of any that we have to subjugate and subdue, to conquer and an analysis of the Bible Society application of the suit for damages for slander brought by Father the wave to best or break that will which nations and kingdoms have found infacible. We have to gather for this work the rough stones of this great people, and to perfect them as generally attaches to meetings of the Bible Society appeared to be well-sustained. After singing a hymn, the proceedings, were opened with prayer by the Rev. D. Fitz Gerald, and an address from the excellent field than Eagland could not be chosen on which to fight the battles of the Church. What Constantinople, and Ephers:, and Africa were to the heresies of old, Eagland is to the last, complex, and manifold hereby of modern times. Were it conquered in Restrength.—Cardinal Wite sam.
