JAMES H. DUNN HONORED BY KING

A London despatch published by the morning papers announced that James H. Dunn, a Nova Scotian, "well known throughout Canada for his connection with a number of important financial deals," had been made a Baron.

No doubt the James H. Dunn referred to is a widely known New Brunswicker, son of the late Robert H. and Eliza (Joudry) Dunn, who was born at St. Peter's Village, Gloucester Co. on October 29, 1875. Educated at Bathurst and Dalhousie, Halifax, young Dunn went to Montreal, became a member of the bar, being associated for some time with J. N. Greenshields, K. C., and finally joined the Montreal Stock Exchange. He made money, and finally went to London where he became a leading banker and broker, and head of the firm of Dunn Fisher & Company. He acquired great wealth, and owns one of the finest collections of horses in Great Britain. Before leaving Canada Mr. Dunn married Miss Gertrude Price, daughter of J. Price lumber merchant, Quebec.

It will be remembered that Mr. Dunn built a hospital at Bathurst, which is named after him, and that he gave $25,000 to Dalhousie University.

Chateau de Ramezay One of Montreal's Historic Relics

The burning of the sands of time alone can give the proper perspective and value to historic buildings. Sometimes spring up to preserve these relics of the past.

Perhaps the most famous of these monuments of the past in Canada is the Chateau de Ramezay in Montreal, which has remained almost unaltered since the days of the old French regime. It was built in 1795 by Monsieur Claude de Ramezay, eleven's governor of Montreal. Here he kept open house with his wife whose hand was the reward of his gallant sortie with 800 men in aid of Quebec in 1690, when the Count de Frontenac, governor of Canada, fended off the English fleet of Sir William Phips.

The Chateau stands in what was once the fashionable part of old Montreal, amid mansions and gardens that merged into the neighboring forests. To-day the homes of Montreal have forsaken the busy waterfront and climb their charming gardens still clinging to them, up the slopes of Mount Royal.

From the days of de Ramezay the Chateau has been the scene of many historic assemblies. Its roof sheltered not only the governor-generals, their suites of fair women and brave men and their illustrious guests, but fur traders, scouts, militia leaders, and Indians.

In 1745 it passed into the hands of the Campagnie des Indes and as India House became the centre of a great fur trade, filling this picturesque and important role for nearly twenty years.

In 1763, after the cession of Canada, it was again the residence of the governor, and invitations to receptions held there during the following century are still in existence.

stayed there for a time. Benjamin Franklin lived in the Chateau when he visited Montreal in 1776 in his effort to persuade the French Canadians to join the new nation to the south, but his was a vain hope. During his stay there he established the Montreal "Gazette," which is still running. Needless to say, he did not found this paper for the purpose of propaganda.

After 1849, the Chateau was for thirty-five years used for government offices. When the government removed to Ottawa, the city presented the Chateau to the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society for a museum, and as such it is unique. Its collection contains all sorts of things ranging from crude home-made utensils fashioned by the clumsy hands of frontier habitants to portraits done by world-renowned artists. One of the most precious things among the thousands catalogued in the Loutsbourge bell, hung in the church there in 1784.

Advertising A Public Necessity.

WHEN goods are scarce and prices high, people are more appreciative than ever of the right kind of advertising.

They are seeking information. They want to know how to buy to the best advantage.

They want to know how to fill their needs and avoid waste. They welcome news of desirable substitutes for the things the country needs to conserve.

They read the newspapers carefully.

The dry goods merchant, grocer, jeweller, or manufacturer who does not advertise is not only missing the purely selfish opportunity, but he is failing in the service he owes to his customers.
