Locarno Treaty Lauded at Guild Hall Banquet

CHAMBERLAIN AND GERMAN AMBASSADOR SHARE LOVING CUP.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The ancient ceremonies attending the induction of London's new Lord Mayor including a long symbolic procession through the streets, which from time immemorial has been a feast for the eyes was carried out to-day in wintry, but bright-sunny weather, and attracted the customary great crowds. The new Lord Mayor, Sir William Robert Pryke, is 78 years of age, but is still so sprightly that he was referred to by the City Recorder in his speech "as like Peter Pan."

The procession itself was on this occasion a sort of miniature Wembley Exhibition on wheels—a pageant of empire trade. The feature was Australia's giant plum pudding, guarded by a kangaroo and a nodding cow with six white horses driven by Father Christmas with a bobbed beard.

The ceremonies culminated with the historic guild Hall banquet, with its great Baron of beef and turtle soup, its city trumpeters to welcome the important guests, and other ancient rites of London's city father.

The banquet is a traditional occasion for political oratory, and there was a brilliant company of ministers of the Crown and prominent men in all walks of life.

Hint of Locarno.

There was a hint of Locarno in another Franco-German gesture, the French ambassador, M. Delfourier making it a point of specially greeting the German Ambassador Dr. Stamer and chatting with him for several minutes at the reception preceding the banquet.

Among the guests were the United States, Spanish, Portuguese and Brazilian ambassadors, Admiral Lord Beatty, the Archbishop of Canterbury and Dean Inge. In passing the loving cup Mrs. Baldwin, on the one side, and Austen Chamberlain on the other, drank with Dr. Stamer.

After the royal toasts were honored Mr. Chamberlain toasted "The Ambassadors and Ministers" expressing the belief that peace was better off than a year ago, the foreign secretary devoted himself to the events at Locarno. He was convinced that what was done there responded to the onerous need of the whole world and would be ratified by every country, for he added, "no statesman would dare assume the responsibility before history of dashing from our lips the cup of hope that Locarno has presented and no nation dare face the obliquity which would follow denial to the world in the hour of its greatest need of its deepest and profoundest hope."

Mr. Chamberlain continued:

"But it is not the written treaties of Locarno which alone will work the change we desire. It is the spirit of Locarno that the world needs and must cherish. Mr. Lord Mayor, thanks to your hospitality I have drunk tonight a loving cup with the German Ambassador. What he and I have done this evening may our nations do to-morrow."

"We will work in the spirit of Locarno, that the peace of our world may be kept and civilization recovered from its wounds."

Mr. Chamberlain concluded with the hope that the same spirit for mutual good-will would hover over the treaty powers conference at Peking, bringing new fellowship between the East and West. He coupled the toast with the name of Senor Merry del Val, the Spanish ambassador, dean of the diplomatic corps, whom he described as "a representative of a sovereign so closely allied with our royal house, well known and admired in our country and of a nation with a great future."

The Spanish ambassador, responding, paid high tribute to the City of London, which he said, "amid all storms, political and otherwise, stands serene and immovable, a pledge to humanity of all most sacred and precious in life, a guarantor and trustee of peace."

High Tribute

He paid high tribute also to Mr. Chamberlain's accomplishment at Locarno. It was not only at Locarno that Great Britain evidenced her will for peace but she had sent the Prince of Wales half around the world as a messenger of peace, who had journeyed indefatigably in many countries and among many races, bearing in the folds of his mantle the "pax Britannica" founded less on force than on the power of Justice.

The Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, replying to the toast to His Majesty's ministers, warmly praised Mr. Chamberlain's efforts at Locarno, saying:

"Everyone of his colleague is proud of him."

Apart from this reference, Premier Baldwin's speech mainly concerned home and dominion affairs and British trade and industrial prospects, in which he expressed tempered optimism. He believed that a large supply of cotton from America would stimulate Lancashire trade, and that the peaceful settlement of Western Europe would greatly help in restoring prosperity. Dealing with the valuable, unselfish and unheralded work of the common people he caused laughter by remarking:

"There are millions of good men whose names never get into the newspapers."

The other speakers included the Air Minister, Sir Samuel Hoare, who announced his department's willingness to lend a machine to contest for the Schneider Cup in 1926 in the United States and Earl Beatty, who urged the need of maintaining an effective navy.

"Heavenly" Twins

Among certain savage tribes in South-Eastern Africa, twins are regarded as the Children of Heaven, and are believed to possess the power of controlling the elements.

In times of drought the people will dig a hole in the ground, put the mother of twins in it, and pour some of their precious water upon her. They believe that this will cause rain to fall.

When a thunderstorm occurs the people appeal to a twin to "talk to Heaven" on their behalf. In many cases the mediator is a mere child, but the natives have implicit faith in his power to persuade the thunder and lightning to go away and leave them in peace. As soon as the storm has abated the youngster is reverently thanked for his intervention.

Snapshots in the Dark

After several years' investigation, Josef Sugrve, of the Industrial Experimental Station of Osaka, Japan, is reported to have invented a black glass that is expected to prove of great military value.

The new glass is opaque to all but ultra-violet rays, and by its use battle formations or the movements of an enemy can be photographed in darkness without detection.

Moving pictures, it is claimed, can also be taken in the dark by the use of this black glass.

British War Savings
Total £750,000,000

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The inherent financial strength of Britain despite the industrial depression is illustrated by the announcement that during and since the war the people's investment in one pound war savings certificates, to the end of September, has totalled 750 million sterling, the amount remaining so invested being 370 millions.

During 1925 certificates have been selling at the rate of a million sterling per week and each week brought 10,000 new buyers.
