story of Mrs. Ellsworth, that she killed her baby because she was starving was untrue. The Ellsworth home contained bountiful supplies. Mrs. Ellsworth had expressed a desire to leave her husband, and her father, Warren Renyon, told her that if she would get rid of Flossie, the baby, he would permit her, and the two older children to come there and live with him. Last Monday Mrs. Ellsworth told her husband that she was going to put Flossie out of the way, and then she would leave him. She burned the baby's clothing in the kitchen stove, and a ruse about the little one being kidnapped was spread

The mother cut a hole in the ice of a pond, and pushed the child under. The prisoners will be tried at the March terms of court.

The Great London Election Trial Is Over.

The Petitioner Has Plenty had him sworn. More Charges,

But They Would Take Up Too Much Time.

And Add to the Volume of Work.

Mr. Aylesworth Asks for Scrutiny of the Votes,

Claiming It Would Increase Beattie's Majority.

But No Decision Will be Given by the Judges Unless the Matter Is Found Important - Mr. Beattle to Go Into the Box on the 19th Section.

The great London election trial is

Mr. Beattle, M.P., goes into the box this afternoon, at his counsel's request, to say that he wore the white flower of a blameless life throughout the election period. Mr. Osler will cross-examine him, and expects to get through in an hour. Then the court will adjourn for good, the judges, Messrs. Osler and Aylesworth, and other officials, leaving on the 4:30 train for the east. Mr. Osler has a murder trial in Bracebridge next week. Their lordships have reserved deciate your throat or lungs and run the risk of filling a consumptive's grave. Their lordships have reserved decirisk of filling a consumptive's grave. Their lordships have reserved deciring the lord proven, and are expected to hand in their judgment within the next four or, five weeks, or befor Earliament meets, in March. If they do not unseat Mr. Beattle on those, there will be an argument on the nineteenth section, as to whether the two charges of corruption found proven are sufficient to invalidate the election. The nine teenth section says that a trifling act of corruption may not void an election, if otherwise it was a pure one. As Mr. Osler announced this morning, there are hundreds of charges against the respondent yet untouched, one group of which-the Hiscott casewould perhaps take a week in itself. Time would not permit of hearing it, and all further evidence would only ### add to the volume of testimony.

Tuesday Atternoon. When the court resumed, Mr. Aylesworth began the argument for the defense on the Noulty case. Mr. Aylesworth impugned the evidence of Watson. Watson's letter was put into the drawer because it had laid around so long. Mr. Toothe was a lawyer, but not a fool, and would hardly put a bill in an envelope in the thought that he was evading the law. At the time of going to press Mr. Aylesworth was still talking. Continuing the argument on the Watson case, Mr. Aylesworth said it was asking too much to say that Messrs. Toothe, Dillon, and McMillan were willfully perjuring themselves. He also attacked the characters of Noulty and Watson, and asked that Tracey, Sharkey and Milligan be beeved in preference. Did Sharkey look like a man who would perjure himself? Noulty's story was that of a man who, angered because he could get no mon-ey, fabricated this story and induced equally disreputable companion to In reply Mr. Osler said that in a previous election case, presided over by Justices Ferguson and McMahon, election was voided on a charge of bribery by an agent, added to other llegal practices, but not by agents. This was done despite the saving clause Judge Ferguson (laughing)-Do you think it's fair to bring a judge's own decision before him? Mr. Osler-Yes, my lord, sometimes it is the only way to make an im- here on Sunday? ression. (Laughter.) In reply to Judge Robertson, Mr. Osler said frankly that either Watson was swearing to what was false, or that Toothe, Dillon and McMillan were doing so. It had not been reasonably explained why there was a letter for

"I doubt if you have seen three cleaner-cut witnesses in this trial than Noulty, Watson and Holmes," said Mr. Osler. "The case requires grave consideration," said Judge Ferguson, when Mr. Osler had concluded. Judge Ferguson asked Mr. Osler his opinion as to the strength of the doubt which a judge should entertain in election cases. Mr. Osler cited several authorities. Judge Robertson said a respondent should not be unseated unless the judges were satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that there had been a corrupt practice. THOMAS HIGGINS.

Thomas Higgins was called upon a charge that he was impersonated at the polls by one Charles E. Higgins. To Mr. Aylesworth, witness said he was a bookkeeper at Robinson & Little's, and had acted half a dozen times as scrutineer.
Mr. Aylesworth got more than a Roland for an Oliver. "How did you know that Thomas Higgins owned that property?" he said in a fierce tone.

A .- I knew he was building on it, and that he had voted on it before. "Answer-my question! How did you know Thomas Higgins owned it? Had you seen his title deed?" "How do I know you're Mr. Aylsworth?" said the witness promptly. A roar of laughter at the clever re joinder followed, and a number clapped their hands, and the high constable threatened to put them out. CHARLES E. HIGGINS. Charles E. Higgins sworn, said he was a lithographer. He was canvassed for his vote by a young man named Campbell, who said his name was on the list. He went to vote on election day at division 23, and remembered that somebody objected to him, and said he was not Chas. Higgins. Witness said he heard nothing about the
