MR LAURIER'S KNIGHTHOOD

Montreal Gazette.

The stacement in the Liberal press that Mr. Laurier only accepted a knighthood at the urgent request of the Queen does not quite do justice to the situation. The facts are that Mr. Laurier met the Queen while she was going around to see personally that the jubilee decorations were all right for the process on. Her keen eye at onne de ested that the Canadian Premier was out of keeping with his sur-oundings. He h d no decoration. She demanded the reas n and was told that, like Sir Richard Cartwright, Sr. Oliver Mowat, Sir Hearti Joly de Loth biniere and other democratic Liberals, Mr. Laurier was averse to the conferring of knighthoods on Canadians. There is a strain of the Erabethan nature in the Queen, and with a remark that she would soon change that, she summoned the Lieutenant of the Tower. Mr. Laurier was seized and hurried to that prison of sad memories, which so many men, notable in England's annuals, have entered, never to quite 'the portals in life. The 'Trator's tark's tark' was oper el; the headsman was at his poet, with his are specially sharpened for work on a thin man's neck. Mr. Laurier was given his choice, the block or a G. C. M. G. He hesitated, and it semed to annoy the now really angry soversign. The headsman or inned; he would, he thought, yet have an op partunity in this jubilee year to have the headsman or inned; he would, he thought, yet have an op partunity in this jubilee year to head the headsman or inned; he would, he thought, yet have an op partunity in this jubilee year to have been made.

The headsman rounded he would, be thought, yet have an op partunity in this jubilee year to show that has efficies in not a sincerure, antival of a past age. But a change came over Mr. Laurier's face. He was thinking of home, of Mr. Blair and his other colleagues, struggling to jam the Drummond County deal through Parliament, of Mr. Greenshields waiting and wondering if his other colleagues, struggling to jam the Drummond County deal through Parliament, of Mr. Greenshields waiting and wondering if his other colleagues at the private gain of political speculators. He weakened, and who can blame him? He would yield; he would not leave his dear colleagues to their div sions just when they were expecting to make something He would take a knighthood; he would not do bert. She would have a regular jubilee of it; she would confer honors on four Cassdam Liberal Ministers, or the headsman would blunt his new edged hatchet. Mr. Mueller's Replies EDITOR NEWS-RECORD

Dear Sir,-I have neither time or incline tion to enter into a newspaper controversy, yet Mr Rowley's letter in Wednesday's issue cal's for a word of reply. It is misleading when he says, "The writer inferentiat many who signed the list did so in s blind manner and now sppear to ra I protested because my name was affixed to a document in which a sentence had been introduced which wasnot on the subscription list, a sentence put there without authority of the subscribers, and which he must have known would be contrary to the sentimen of a large number of subscribers.

Agaio, it is m sleading when he say ing me hie subscription, asking me to put down his name."—It will quite naturally be inferred that I did not see the list, which is that has to do with the question.

The offer to return the money, and doing so, is so uncalled for and small that I'll lose it a duty to myself and my position when I protested against the introduction of a seniment not contained in the subscription list, and now having done this T shall have A. MUELLER
