did not correspond with "Pa's" idea how the horse should be rigged, so he removed the weights taken off, which was his. When Geers came back he asked everything was all right and was replied in the affirmative. Before mounting Geers, he looked the horse over, and his critical eye noted the absence of the weights. "Where are the weights which you put on?" asked Geers, and Geers said the information that "Pa" had given them taken off. Geers, so it is looked at "Pa," and in the quietest voice asked: "Mr. Hamlin, are you going to drive or am I? If I am, I want the weights on." That settled it, and then Geers has had his own way as to how to rig his horses.
