

FENIANISM.

How the Movement is Made to Keep up in Lancashire.

EXCOMMUNICATION AND THE CAUSE.

A most exciting meeting in support of the Fenian Brotherhood was lately held in Manchester, at which Messrs. D'Olier, Austin, and Cavanaugh, three delegates from America, and several delegates from Lancashire towns, were present.

D'Olier—Yes, but let them try organization first, and keep the bayonets as a forlorn hope. They had already commenced the organization; money would follow when required, and from the American fund (cheers); but God grant that bayonets might never be resorted to.

The Chairman—I must remind our American brother that we are not here to sit in judgment upon the decisions of the Church—(hear, hear)—but simply to consider the best means of restoring our fallen section to its primitive position.

PLANS OF THE FENIANS FOR THE LIBERATION OF IRELAND.

THE LAND AGITATION DENOUNCED.

LONDON, August 12.—News of the robbery of arms committed from the Norwegian ship Juno at Cork this morning created considerable excitement here, not so much on account of itself as for what it may indicate as to the state of affairs in Ireland.

In the House of Commons this evening Mr. Forster, Home Secretary for Ireland, in reply to a question, confirmed the news of the seizure of arms from the ship Juno at Cork.

LONDON, August 13.—Some further details of the Fenian raid in Cork Harbor have been received, but owing to the fact that the Government has monopolized the telegraph wire for its own use, particulars thus far received have been meagre.

The following is clipped from the Irish correspondence of the New York Herald—

The peaceful people and the newspaper correspondents of England and Ireland are occasionally much exercised by the reports which sometimes creep into the press of Fenian plots, the drilling of men in the dead of night, the importation of arms and other mysterious indications of incipient revolution.

does exist an organization, powerful and determined as it ever was, and under its present programme of operations more likely to succeed than any previous movement.

It was at this time (1867) that that branch of American Fenianism known as the "Senate" party deputed a gentleman, now member of Parliament for a Western county constituency, to gather the scattered links of the Irish Revolutionary Association and put them into place.

London, August 10.—News has reached Quetta that Ayoub Khan has been wounded while separating two bands of his followers, the Herates and the Cabules, who were quarrelling over the division of spoils captured from the British.

There is probably no part of Ireland where the revolutionary feeling is stronger than in this province of Munster, and nowhere are there bolder or more desperate spirits than in the city of Cork.

"Do you not, then, sympathize with the land movement?" I asked, considerably surprised. "On the contrary," said he, "the Fenian Brotherhood totally objects to land agitation, as the agitators will find to their cost very soon."

revolutionists' simple and sole object is a complete separation from England by force, believing that to be the only hope for attaining their object.

THE AFGHANISTAN CAMPAIGN.

London, August 10.—A despatch just received from the Viceroy, Lord Ripon, states that the evacuation of the military railway below Hannais has been completed.

News from Candahar is to the effect that the garrison have not as yet had any immediate attack from Ayoub Khan, and make frequent successful skirmishes with tribesmen who are hovering in the neighborhood in isolated bands.

From Counter To Crosier.

A GROCERY CLERK BECOMES A HIGH DIGNITARY OF THE CHURCH.

Happening on Saturday morning to meet at the City Hall Mr. W. C. Raymond, that gentleman narrated to a representative of the Times a biographical episode, which for phenomenal success might compare most favorably with the career of those who for all time will live in history, and which affords to the student of human character one of the best examples of the possibilities within the scope of human achievement that ever came within the writer's observation.

It might be well to state for the information of those not already acquainted with that very generally known fact, that Mr. W. C. Raymond was at one time numbered among the largest and best patronized family grocers in this city, and that his establishment, located on Camp street, just above the corner of Commercial place, was sought by a large majority of the lovers of good things.

"Many years ago," remarked Mr. Raymond, "there were employed in my store two young men, George Swarbrick, with whom you are, no doubt, well acquainted, and his brother-in-law, Jimmy Gibbons, concerning whom I may narrate something that will prove of interest, when I say that my former employee, Jimmy Gibbons, who rolled barrels and tied up packages of sugar in my store, and his grace, the Right Rev. James Gibbons, archbishop of Baltimore, the confidential friend of his holiness, Leo XIII, and a high dignitary of the Catholic church in the United States, are one and the same person."

"James Gibbons was in my employment about eighteen months. He was without exception, one of the most energetic, intelligent, and strictly conscientious young men I have met in the whole course of my life.

"After a service in my store of eighteen months, young Gibbons announced to me that he intended to quit work, conceiving it to be his duty to attend the theological seminary at St. Mary's, in Maryland, and study for the priesthood. A bright student and a man of earnest convictions, he early won the esteem of his professors, and not only this, but the favorable notice of the Right Reverend Archbishop of the Diocese. So high an opinion was held of Father Gibbons by the church, that after his ordination he was selected to take charge of the parish of Canton, just opposite Baltimore.

"In this parish several priests had previously failed utterly to create an interest in the church or even to establish a parish of any numbers or influence whatever. Within two years Father Gibbons had not only created a splendid temple of worship, but had created one of the largest and most influential parishes in the entire neighborhood. His great success in this induced the archbishop to retain Father Gibbons as his private secretary, a position which he held for some years.

"During this time it became necessary to choose a missionary bishop for the diocese of North Carolina, a State which, at that time, had but one Catholic church within its borders, that of Wilmington. Gibbons name was forwarded to the Holy See as being that of a suitable candidate for the appointment, but a reply came back from Rome that inasmuch as the candidate was believed to be of Irish birth, and that it was deemed inexpedient to appoint to a bishopric any but priests born within the country wherein they exercised jurisdiction, an appointment was refused.

"There occurred the most extraordinary circumstances yet to be narrated, a diligent search into his family history disclosed the fact, that though Gibbons' father and mother, although both of Irish birth, soon after their marriage emigrated to America, where their son James was born. They returned to Ireland with the child, and James did not return to America until he became a youth, but is really an American born, and a citizen of the United States.

"This circumstance removed every obstacle to his appointment as missionary bishop of North Carolina, and he became among all classes one of the most esteemed prelates who ever officiated in that State.

"The demise of the Bishop of Richmond elevated Bishop Gibbons to his See, and made him the legate of one of the wealthiest bishoprics in the country, and the more recent death of the Archbishop of Baltimore has elevated this fortunate prelate, who was also his grace's heir to the archbishopric, and the highest position of the Catholic Church in America. All this has happened in the course of comparatively a very few years."

The writer distinctly remembers a time when Mr. George Swarbrick, now a prominent merchant, and James Gibbons, were both employees in Mr. W. C. Raymond's store, and were the story not so well authenticated as it is, it would have the appearance more of romance than of reality.—New Orleans Times.
