Interim Supply

following the principle that the wheel that squeals the loudest gets all the grease.

The Chairman: Shall the resolution carry? [Translation]

Mr. Pigeon: Mr. Speaker, may I call it ten o'clock?

[Text]

Mr. Pickersgill: Mr. Chairman, since this is interim supply and with a view to getting it through I wonder whether, provided the hon. member for Red Deer would be the last speaker, there would be a disposition to go on and complete it tonight.

Some hon. Members: No.

An hon. Member: We have other speakers.

Mr. Pigeon: And we would like to hear the President of the Privy Council.

Mr. Pearson: You will hear him Christmas eve.

Mr. Thompson: May I call it ten o'clock. Progress reported.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the house leader what is the forecast of the business for the rest of the week?

Mr. Pickersgill: Mr. Speaker, I would prefer not to make any forecast beyond tomorrow because, pursuant to the suggestion made earlier by the Prime Minister, I should like to have conversations with certain hon. gentlemen opposite with a view to planning the business for the rest of the week. Tomorrow we will go on with this urgent business of interim supply and hope to conclude it after one or two brief speeches. As soon as it has been concluded we will go on with the redistribution resolution. If this should be completed, as I fervently hope it will be, the Minister of Transport has several legislative items on the order paper we could take up, starting with the C.O.T.C.

At ten o'clock the house adjourned, without question put.
