

from any of the previous twenty-four Parliaments. There is no added onus on the Senate. The obligation of the Senate, to revert to the quotation of Senator Dandurand, is to speak to the question and not to the electorate.

The fact that their friends in another place are attempting to move to the left of the party concerning which this editorial was written will not, I am sure, influence my friends on the opposite side of this chamber in maintaining its high traditions.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Cameron, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 3 p.m.
