He explained that in book reading a man sometimes lost interest in this and the time came for him to lose interest when he found he could write a book himself. He considered that the pruner of a book was the real artist, in the same manner as with a gardener, for he could then look at his work and say, "How is that?" "Nature," the speaker stated, "is the best book, for in the country there are many things which no book can give."

In dealing with libraries he explained that there are many libraries of more importance than the institutes which are patronized by the thousands. In small country villages there are spontaneous libraries where the young boys and girls buy a book ard lend it to their friends. "I remember a case with a friend of mine. He bought a copy of "Hucklebury Finn" and loaned to a friend, who in his turn passed it on. Some time later my friend wanted the book, and it it on. Some time later my wanted the book, and it cost him no little sum on long-dis-tance telephone calls to get it back. But he got it back. The cover was gone, but 'Huckleberry Finn' still remained, and again started on its tour."
Mr. McArthur is of the opinion that children of today are reading better books than their parents, and explained this by the fact that it is cheaper today to buy classic literature than modern fiction, and by the fact that books are forced on the children by being given to them as presents

"I was at dinner in a Toronto restaurant this afternoon," he said, "and had a conversation with a gentleman on the Johnson-Willard fight. ## ELECTION CROOKS THRIVE IN CANADA Parties Admit Corruption is Rampant, But Differ as to Remedy.

PUGSLEY'S BRIGHT IDEA

Proposal Which Would Entail Disfranchising Electors Was Rejected.

OTTAWA, April . 5 .- The house toed at considerable length in commit-tee of the whole Mr. Doherty's bill to amend the Controverted Election Act. The bill is designed to expedit the trial of election protests by cutting off preliminary objections and appeals. Curiously enough, the minister of justice today introduced a bill permitting provincial election trials to be further extended than at present by appeals to the supreme court of to be further extended than at present by appeals to the supreme court of Canada. The legislation will apply to the cases growing out of the recent provincial elections in Manitoba.

Amendment Defeated.

The principal discussion today was upon an amendment proposed by Hon. William Pugsley. It provided that, in the trial of Dominion election cases, the court might not only deprive the the trial of Dominion election cases, the court might not only deprive the successful candidate of his seat if corrupt practices were proved, but award the seat to the candidate receiving the next highest number of votes, provided the latter were able to prove that neither he nor his agents had been guilty of any corruption. The amendment was voted down and the bill itself was left in committee.

Electoral Corruption.

About the one thing all the members who took part in the discussion seemed to agree upon was that electoral corruption was on the increase, and that the severe penalties against corrupt practices had not proved a detriment. The prime minister regretted that the bill did not contain a provision for the intervention in election sion for the intervention in election trials of an official corresponding to the public prosecutor in England, while Mr. Burnham (W. Peterboro) took the position that the way to stop election crookedness was to arrest and imprison election crooks promptly.

"We manage to suppress liquor son election crooks promptly.

"We manage to suppress liquor selling and drunkenness on election day," he said, "and also the rough and tumble fighting that accompanied elections in the old days. We do this by locking up people who fight, get drunk or sell liquor. We do not wait for some controverted election trial two or three years in the future, which may never come off. In every closely contested by-election, notorious crooks come into the riding and make no effort to conceal their presence or effort to conceal their presence or identity. They put up at the leading hotels and live like prize fighters, and the day after polling they clear out."

Pugsley's Remedy.

How William Pugsley proposed an

Hon. William Pugsley proposed an amendment of a drastic character. present when corrupt practices are proved, the election is voided. His proved, the election is voided. His amendment would require the judges to award the seat to the unsuccessful candidate, provided that candidate and candidate, provided that candidate and his agents had run a pure election.

Mr. Pugsley said parliament had been passing laws for 40 years to prevent election crookedness. Yet in spite of all these penalties elections were more corrupt than ever. Never in the past had politics been as corrupt in Canada as they are today. We had severe laws, but apparently we had severe laws, but apparently nobody paid any attention to them. If parliament really wished pure elections, something else might be tried. There is no encouragement, he said, for a man to be scrupulously clean in election methods. If he was beaten the contract the contract of the contract the contract of the contract the contract of the contract th by corrption and spent thousands of dollars in proving that fact, he got nothing in return and the candidate corruptly elected was re-elected usually as a matter of course. Mr. Pugsley, therefore, suggested that the candidate who ran an absolutely pure election should be given the seat where corrupt practices were proved against his successful competitor, or Unfair to Constituency. Sir Robert Borden objected that such a provision would work great injustice to a constituency. The people might overwhemingly prefer John Smith to John Jones and yet because some friend of Smith's had been guilty of a corrupt practice they would be compelled to accept John Jones as member of parliament.

Mr. Proulx (Prescott) thought the Mr. Proulx (Prescott) thought the Pugsley amendment opened the door to conspiracy. A candidate, hopeless of being elected by the people, might influence a nagent of the other candidate to commit some corrupt act and thus get into parliament by the decision of the judges.

Hon. C. J. Doherty pointed out that the present law permitted one vote to be deducted from the score of the successful candidate for every corrupt act be deducted from the score of the suc-cssful candidate for every corrupt act proved, and thus it might happen that, in a closely contested election the judges would award the seat to the candidate having the smaller number of votes, in the face of the returns. He contended that Mr. Pugsley's amendment would extend this principle to a dangerous extent. He went on to to a dangerous extent. He went on to say that the courts had always been careful not to override the will of the Laurier Backs Pugsley.

Sir Wilfrid Lauried strongly supported the Pugsley amendment. He admitted that it might penalize a constituency to impose upon it the candidate who was not their choice for member of parliament, but under the present law the will of the people was constantly set aside by voiding elections for corrupt practices. Constituencies were punished to some extent at present upon the ground that purity of elections was essential to the safety of the state. Evidently, however, parliament had not gone far enough. Washington Cannot Admit Claims of Allies to Stop German Goods.

SEA LAW IS RECITED

Privilege of Retaliation Not Admitted Either by President Wilson.

WASHINGTON, April 5 .- The United States Government today made public its note to Great Britain, announcing that "it could not admit" either the right of the allies or their claims for justification in placing an embargo on all commercial intercourse between Germany and neutral ccuntries.

"To admit it," says the communication, "would be to assume the attitude of unneutrality toward the present enemies of Great Britain, which would be obviously inconsistent with the solemn obligations of this government in the present circumstances, and for Great Britain to make such a claim would be for her to abandon and to set at naught the principles for which she has consistently and earnestly centended in other times and circumstances."

Goes Into Sea Law.

The note reviews at length the legal phases of a blockade of belligerent territory, and virtual blockade coasts. In conclusion the United States states its expectation that Great Britain, after having considered "the possibilities of serious interruption of American trade" under the order in council, "will take the steps necessary to avoid them, and in the event that they should unhappily occur, will be prepared to make full reparation for every act, which under the rules of international law constitutes a violation of neutral recents." tutes a violation of neutral rights." The American communication inerprets the circumstances which Great Britain claims to be justifled in adopting retaliatory m toward her enemies as "merely a rea son for certain extraordinary activi-ties by her naval forces, and not an excuse for or a prelude to any unlawful action. No Reason for Retaliation.

"If the course of the present enemies of Great Britain," the note adds, "should prove to be in fact tainted by illegality and disregard of the principles of war sanctioned by enlightened nations, it cannot be supposed, and this government does not for a mo-ment suppose, that his majesty's government would wish the same taint to attach to their own actions." Amhassador Sharp at Paris was instructed to present a copy of the American note to Great Britain to the French foreign office, with the state-ment that altho the French admiralty decree had not been officially received in Washington, it was understood here to be identical with the British order in council, and the American Government therefore made similar
