

- Unsanctification, XLII.
- Vicarious sacrifice, the doctrine of, XCVI. 1.
- Vice is misery, XXXIVc. 2-6; has lucid intervals, ib. 6.
- Virtue, XIIc., note, XXXIIIc., XXXIV.; in 2 Peter i. 5, properly means manly energy, XIIc.; self-interest, XXXIVc.
- Virtue in the Pagan and Christian sense, CI. 3.
- Virtue a medicine, and vice a wound, CII.
- Wanderers, the sincere portion of, XCIV.
- Waterland, works of, commended for clerical perusal, CVII. 2, note.
- Wedding garment, the, of the sanctified, CVII. 2.
- Will, see motives, XLIIIc. 2; acts in harmony with our condition, ib.; acted upon by the Holy Spirit, XLIIIc. 4-6; constitutes the principle of personalty, ib. 5; supernatural, ib. 8.
- Will, the, spiritual, LXXXIX. 1-2; exists in man, ib. 4; needful to spiritual religion, ib. 5; is responsible, ib. 9; effect of motives upon, ib. 11; diseased, caused the fall of man, ib.; freedom of the, ib. 12; must co-exist with intelligence, ib. 13; and spiritual truths, XCVIIc.; Edwards and Williams on, ib.; redemption of the, from slavery, ib.; the enslaved, and unbelief connected, CIV. 1; suffices in man for a motive, CVIIc. 5; spiritual, CVIII. 1; responsible, as connected with man's responsibility, CIXc. 16; is either self-determining or not a will at all, is the ground of personality in man, and is capable of good or evil, ib.; otherwise there is no sin of the agent, ib. 17; an evil responsible will may be predicated of every man, ib. 18; and is the scriptural doctrine of original sin, and of moral evil, ib. 20, CXI.; in a pure rational agent is identical with the law or divine will, CXIVc.; the Greek fathers and discussions of the schools, CXVIIIc. 17; opposed to nature, the originating power preceded by self-consciousness, CIXc. note; the finite will limited, ib.; not the reason, ib. 3; a corrupt will cannot fulfil the divine law, ib. 11, note; free, ib.; in animals subjugated to their nature, CXIVc.; supernatural character of a personal, CXVIIIc. 19; an act of the, in matters of faith, CXXII.
- Williams, Dr., on the will, XCVIIc.
- Wisdom, spiritual, VI., XIIIc.; more difficult than folly, XVIII.
- Wonder, the, origin and head of philosophy, CVII.; the offspring of ignorance and the parent of adoration, ib.; wonder precedes reflection, CVII* 1.
- Word, the, name as applied to the Saviour, XCVIIIc. 16.
- Words, proper use of, XXXIIIc.; different senses of some, ib.; study of, XCVc. 2; as spirit, ib., XVI. 11., note; one, XCVIIIc. 14; and names the exclusive subjects of the understanding, CVI. 12; as red, ib.; nomenclature, ib. 13; import of, CVIIc., note; a clear distinction of, depends upon the clear distinction of things, CVI. 4; the proper estimation of, a necessary means of self-knowledge, ib. 11, note; the unkindness of, ib.; popular work, ib.; discourse, CVI. 12; having distinct meanings, CVIII. 3; confusion of, leads to errors in things, ib.; regret, remorse, origin, CIX.; right, CIXc. 8*.
- Works of genius and ordinary readers, CVI. 11, note.
- World, the, constitutes our outward circumstances, XXI.; a unity, XLIIIc. 3; at enmity with religious pursuits, XXI.; cannot satisfy, LXXXV.
- Worldly hopes, XLV.; delights in injurious excess, LIII.; views, the bane of the ministry, LXV.
- Zoologists, writings of, with regard to the dog, CVIIc. 7, 8.
- Zuinglius and Calvin, XCVIIIc. 1.