WHO'LL BE DRESS INSPECTOR AT THE BEACHES

IKE somebody says, nothin' is ever took away from us what aint replaced one better, and aint it the truth? When the burlesk shows close we have the mmer resorts, which are in commutin' distance, and the swimmin' season, which fetches out new styles in bathin' suits, which make up for the loss of any chorus. Me and Hildegarde is campin' near the water, and last night she never showed for eats, which I had to do justice to myself, after which, I, In loneliness, a niddy, and a cance, blew in at the beach jest in time to hear the merry-go-round ender "Kiss Me Again," with tender feelin'. And there was I, listenin' and tryin' to make up my mind was Hil drowned or havin' a good time with a bunch of fleetfoot Percies, when along comes a slew of natives, headed by Hil, and 1 swan if they all wasn't wearin' the briefest of V-shapes. Of course, a one-piece bathin' suit is no disgrace if the piece is big eno I'll say the one Hil was wearin' would restore the speech to a dumb waiter. And where she got it I didn't know, unless she borried it from Skinny Penny. The bird what was with her was the one what was always telephonin' and wantin' to see more of Hil, and bulleve me, he got his wish.

It was shore no place for a perfect lady, so I give my canoe a push in my mode est manner, and made for the camp hittin' on two, but not without noticin' that all along the beach the suits got darin' and more so, till, by the time I reached our diggins there wasn't a one to be saw what was within three yards of the law re-But I want you to get me right on this. Far be it from me to be an advocate of dress reform, but it gets me sore when I realize I aint got the plan to stand decolletage myself. I've got too much brains behind my face to try to get away with anything what aint an all-over. So take it from me, if the neighbors make too much row playin' "it's Tulip Time in Holland" with banjo arrangement, don't forget it's swimmin' time in Toronto, and hike it out and become a member of the water babies, and rent a bathin suit even if you don't go in the water get me? You do
