KING EDWARD HONORS BOSTON MAN FOR HEROISM IN INDIA

(Boston Post.)

A South Boston man, Robert J. Kirkwood of 12 F street, last week received from King Edward a medal for bravery in saving the life of General Galbraith during the English campaign of 1888, in India, and thereon hangs a tattered room tale mentioned in Kipling's "Tales of the Hills," but still passed round by Tommy Atkins as one of the memorable stories of that memorable Indian struggle.

It happened at the time of the Hazara campaign, when the troops of the Thirtieth Punjabi Light Infantry, the Eighteenth Royal Irish Fusiliers and the Fourth Punjab Light Infantry, under General Galbraith, were sent into the Black Mountains, on the border of Afghanistan, to avenge the massacre of the corps of engineers slain by the hill men in 1887.

Kirkwood was the regimental signaller of the Eighteenth Irish Fusiliers, a six-footer of 23.

The battle of Kot-dai had just been fought and the "devil" of the hill tribes, hundreds in number, lay in a slaughtered heap.

The charges of every rifle and revolver in the regiment had been drawn when the order to cease firing was given.

General Galbraith, accompanied by his staff, was slowly moving among the heaps of wounded dead and slain before the motionless lines of his soldiers, when suddenly, as the general stooped to examine the face of one of the naked dead, three wild hill men, fogging death, leaped from the ground, and, with spears in their hands, made for the commander. A thrill of horror ran through the lines of unloading soldiers. Both the commander and his staff were defenceless, being only armed with empty revolvers. The officers dared not order the troops to load and fire for fear of hitting those in the field.

Suddenly the tall signaller of Company E, Irish Fusiliers, muttered a word to his sergeant: "Shall I go, sergeant?" "My God, Bob, yes!"

Clapping his bayonet upon the rifle and running home a cartridge as he ran, Kirkwood leaped across the field.

With a lunge of his powerful arm he caught one of the attacking madmen square under the throat and his bayonet went home to the hilt. Then, with quick, fair aim of his rifle, he sent the second native reeling on the ground.

The third fanatic, dodging the trooper, leaped toward the general. The latter turned aside the first stroke of the spear with his sword.

Kirkwood wheeled. The spear of the hill man swung pointed above the latter's shoulder for a last fatal drive, when, whack! the butt of a 10-pound rifle struck him squarely over the head, and, like a burning rag, he dropped simply to the ground.

And so Robert Kirkwood won his spurs. Fifteen years ago Mr. Kirkwood gave up the English army for a home in Boston.

Mr. Kirkwood served in the signal corps during the Spanish-American war.

STRIKE WAS A FAILURE

Millmen Will go Back to Work at the Old Rate of Wages.

At a meeting of the Millmen's Union, held last night at their headquarters, Main street, it was decided to call off the strike. Wm. Murphy, vice-president, was the chair. Mr. Murphy said: "We have decided to go back to work at the old scale and the decision is to go back at once, and I believe by Saturday all the mills will be running. We thought this the best way, as things seemed to be going against us."

Mr. Murphy said further that President John Martin's course, advising the men to stand out, had not been criticized and that no arrangement had been made with the operators to take back the old hands and discharge those taken on in their places.

The men will meet again in Union Hall Tuesday night by which time the quarter from the International Union will have arrived.

J. J. Fossier Gregory was asked last evening if the lumber business in St. John had been much affected by the shut down. He said that as far as the mill owners were concerned it had not made much difference. The men, he thought, had gone out on a mistaken idea that the owners would be placed at the mercy of the strike. However, had been the case, there was no supply of logs to speak of on hand and the market had been falling.

Novelties in Construction of Big Battleship Agamemnon Will Cost $7,500,000.

The British battleship Agamemnon, of 15,000 tons, was successfully launched at Glasgow last Saturday and was christened by the Countess of Aberdeen. Among the novelties in the construction of the ship are the following: All her guns will be above the upper deck and her heavy guns will be more concentrated in the centre of the vessel, while the smaller pieces will be carried on a central platform deck, extending about one-third the length of the ship and upward of 100 feet above the water line, giving great command on all sides of the water round the ship.

The Agamemnon is 410 feet long, has 791-2 feet beam, draws 27 feet of water and her engines have 16,750 indicated horsepower, giving her a speed of 18 knots. She has an armored belt twelve inches thick and eight inches of armor on her sides, above the belt. Her armament consists of four 12-inch guns, ten 9-2-inch guns, thirty-seven smaller guns and five torpedo tubes. The new battleship carries 900 tons of coal and a crew of 865 officers and men. She will have cost $7,500,000 when completed.

ONE SUNDAY FOR ALL

Jews as Well as Gentiles Will be Subject to Canada's New Sunday Law.

OTTAWA, June 28—The Sunday Observance Bill was again taken up in the house yesterday.

Mr. Aylesworth moved an amendment to the Sunday Observance Bill, inserting the word "like" and making it read that a man might not shoot at a target or other inanimate object.

Old Sam Hughes moved to restrict game shooting, target shooting, turkey and pigeon shooting.

The house finally accepted R. L. Borden's amendments to clause 9 as follows: "It shall not be lawful for any person on the Lord's Day to shoot or to use any gun, rifle or other similar weapon either for gain or in such a manner or in such places as to disturb other persons in attendance in public worship or in the observance of that day."

Another clause provided that foreign newspapers or publications could not be brought into Canada for sale or distribution on the Lord's Day. The clause was adopted.

Upon the clause taking exception in favor of persons who conscientiously and habitually observe as a day of rest and worship any day other than Sunday and actually refrain from work, labor or trade on that day, and if he be an employer, permits any work or labor or trade to be performed on that day upon his premises shall not be subject to prosecution for permitting work or labor on the first day of the week provided such work or labor does not disturb other persons in the observance of that day of the week.

As a sub-clause Borden provided that the day of rest and worship mentioned in this section must be a period of time reckoned as such by the various creeds to which belong the persons who are entitled to enjoy the privileges of this section.

All amendments were lost.

The original clause in the bill dealing with those who observed the 7th day of the week was then debated by 57 to 79 against. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden both voted for the clause.

Clause 12, permitting a policeman to force his way into a building other than a dwelling, where he thought the act was being violated, was dropped.

Clause 16 was amended so that nothing in the act would prevent the operation of any railway subject to a period of time reckoned as such by the various creeds to which belong the persons who are entitled to enjoy the privileges of this section.

Dr. Daniel said that this would allow the operation of any railway which was now running unless the provinces would prohibit it.

An amendment was made providing that prosecution should begin under the act within thirty days.

The committee rose and reported progress.
