The Holy City

A Twentieth Century "Vision"

J. S. Woodworth, Director, Bureau of Social Research in Canadian Municipal Journal

It was in Montreal. Throughout the evening I had been thinking and writing about the needs and possibilities of the city. Weary of "statutes" and "problems" and tired of sitting, I laid down my pen, put on my coat and hat and went out into the streets. Almost instinctively I took my way toward the mountain. The drives were now deserted and quiet. I began to climb the long dark steps. Up and up—there is an exhilaration simply in climbing and one is always rewarded at the top.

At last the great city lay below me. Its myriad lights stretched away into the indistinctness of the enveloping night. The clouds had obscured the stars above me, but below was an inverted sky. In the street lights shone through the slightly illuminated mist, like the brighter stars in the midst of the milky way. To make the illusion complete, the light of an occasional car appeared as a falling star.

Who could not dream? On "Tennyson's phrase," I dipped into the future. I saw Montreal, a vast city, the metropolis of a country as populous as the United States. The city was ten times its present size—second London, stretching north and south and east and west, covering the island and stretching beyond the rivers.

The haunting music of "The Holy City" was in my ears. Then came back to me a sacred evening hour when from the Mount of Olives I had looked across to old Jerusalem. It was doubtless near the very spot from which Jesus had beheld the city and wept over it. Two thousand years had passed—two thousand years of Christian teaching and effort, and still the people of Jerusalem were living in poverty and ignorance and vice. Had the work of Jesus then been a failure? No. His work had to be repeated by each of his disciples. His work had to be carried a step further—a step nearer completion—by each generation.

My thoughts came back from Palestine to my own land. I strained my eyes to see Montreal as the Holy City. The great domes and the minarets, the war-houses and office buildings were concealed in the darkness, but everywhere gleamed the tiny pinpoints that betokened ten thousand homes.

Yes, the Holy City would be a vast city of homes. There would not be of thousands of vacant lots held from the use of the people. Every family might own a home of its own. In our Father's house are many mansions! Then into my mind there came crowding the pictures of the poor homes in the city which I had visited a few days before. There was a poor Italian home in a tenement, the rooms dark and ill-smelling, the window kept closed to keep out the stench of the street. The mother was well-nigh discouraged, the children were surrounded by unwholesome influences. The father, one day of brightness, suggesting as it did the Christ child of one of the Italian masters.

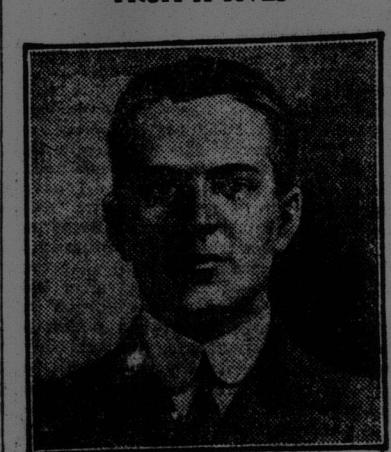

There was the Jewish home where the mother was tubercular. The Irish home where the father was shiftless. The Russian home—street after street of wretchedness.

I thought of the homeless men of the City Refuge—the old emaciated wrecks of humanity dead of day. Poor fellows, had been too much for them. "Happy home-life"—the phrase was for them a bit of mockery.

SEVEN YEARS TORTURE

Nothing Helped Him Until He Took "FRUIT-A-LIVES"

ALBERT VARNER.
Buckingham, Que., May 28, 1915.
For seven years, I suffered terribly from Severe Headaches and Indigestion. I had belching gas from the stomach, bitter stuff would come up into my mouth after eating, while at times I had nausea and vomiting, and had chronic Constipation. I went to several doctors and wrote to a specialist in Boston, but without benefit. I tried many remedies but nothing did me good. Finally, a friend advised "Fruit-a-lives." I took this grand fruit medicine and it made me well. I am grateful to "Fruit-a-lives," and to everyone who has miserable health with Constipation and Indigestion and Bad Stomach, I say take "Fruit-a-lives," and you will get well.

his ability to the welfare of the community; such as a matter of course enjoying his full share of the opportunities which the community offered.

There were great buildings with domes and steeples that looked something like churches and yet all the people seemed to frequent them for all sorts of purposes. They were the common meeting places. The earlier distinction between sacred and secular seemed to have no meaning. Formal "services" conducted by rival institutions were replaced by the gathering together of congenial groups to discuss the further development and beautification of the city. "I saw no temple therein." The city itself was one vast temple.

The vision faded. The night wind was cold. I discerned the indistinct outlines of the work-places of the future. To these men and women went forth in the morning not like "dumb driven cattle," but eagerly as the artist to his studio or the scholar to his books.

HUNS ELIMINATED FROM THE EAST

Japanese Ambassador on International Politics

His Tribute To Canada

'Great Britain and Japan Working For Same Ideal'—Relations With U. S. Entirely Friendly

"I just want to say that in regard to the present war I am delighted to see the spirit of determination that animates the Allied Powers," said the Marquis Inouye, until recently Japanese Ambassador to the Court of St. James, to The Toronto Telegram.

"That spirit prevails in the hearts and minds of those who are fighting for the same ideals and who have the same object in view. The hearts of the Japanese people are with the Anglo-Saxon race and their allies in their determination to win for the civilized states of the world that freedom of action which refuses to be dominated by any military autocracy. The same object is aimed at by the peoples of the British dominions, and that homogeneity of spirit is bound in the long run to achieve success. Especially in Canada I recognized the martial ardor of the people. Here everything is subordinated to the great aim and object we have in view. Like our allies, the Japanese people are one in determining that this terrible war must be brought to an honorable and glorious termination.

"In men, in munitions and money, the Dominion of Canada has given of her best and given freely. Out of the abundance of her stores she has poured her strength into the battle arena, and her arms have been adorned by imperialistic glory. When I think of your heroes I recall the days and epochs when Japan emerged from her comparative obscurity and took her place by force of arms in the comity of nations. The military spirit has made an island country great, and like Great Britain there is no thought of bowing down to the might of any other power. Greatly we have been entailed, but who shall say that they are not worth while? No sacrifice too great for the preservation of liberty, and the right to work out their logical ends the aims of free peoples.

At this stage the Marquis said smilingly, "Great Britain and Japan are working for the same ideal. East and west have joined hands in an indissoluble bond of unity. We may have different trade interests, but we may be rivals in many spheres of activity, but at heart we are animated by the same noble aims. Today, when I am enjoying the hospitality of your glorious country I think with deepest respect of the sacrifices made by the two nations in the heroism of your soldiers. I appreciate their gallantry, their unselfish spirit, and the fact that they have sacrificed their first contingent went to the fields of Flanders.

Victory Assured.
"I will carry back with me to Japan the firm conviction already firm in my mind that victory will crown our efforts. Everything points to a glorious outcome of the struggle. The present peace is but a lull in the storm. The Russian advance in the east, seems to have our enemies in a vice. Our pressure on them will become increasingly powerful until the goal is reached. It is now in sight, and the oppressed countries will soon be freed. A period of terrorism and injustice which has never been equalled in the annals of warfare. The blood-drenched Germany will be an indication of final victory—a victory which shall crown the arms of the allied powers.

German Plans Foiled.
"What about Kian Chan?" asked The Telegram reporter.
"With regard to that naval base," said his Excellency, "we anticipated that the Germans were seeking to make it a stronghold for the further domination of the east, and a point from which to try to strengthen their power in the far east. This is borne out by the fact that they had strengthened the port and made it a difficult task for the Japanese fleet to take it. Recognizing that it was their last stronghold in the east, the Germans are now in the last, but I believe now in our hands, and Germany must view with disgust the loss of the last link of her power in eastern waters.

China was Victimized.
"What will you do with Kian Chan?" asked The Telegram.
"Our desire is to return it to China," said his Excellency. "The port belongs to the Chinese people."

consider the pretext of the Serbian incident and the rash step Austria-Hungary at the instigation of Germany, and the efforts of Russia and Great Britain to stay the frenzy at Berlin, and when we recall the violent dash through Belgium and Luxembourg in spite of treaty obligation with the undisputed intent of striking Paris before the French forces could be effectively mobilized, and the reluctance with which Great Britain was forced into the conflict by a similar obligation—in view of all these things it is simply amazing that such a pretence should be made as that the English brought on the war to destroy Germany and "the most peaceful and peace-loving people in the world."

"Considering what Belgium and a wide strip of France along the German border and their inhabitants have suffered, without provocation, except being in the way of Germany's long-cherished designs, where are we to think of the awful charge of the English purpose to invade German soil to the peril and undoing of villages? In view of all the circumstances and what has been occurring before the eyes of the world in the last two years, how can such utterances as these be credited as coming from the lips of the German people? Are the people of Germany under such a delusion as to accept them as coming from lips that are not only sane but inspired and consecrated by the fact that the speaker wears the Hohenzollern crown? It is said that when the Reichstag reassembles there will be an interpellation addressed to the imperial chancellor, asking why inspiring speeches by the emperor at the front are withheld from general publication? It is to be hoped that he will be asked and will answer truly.

to them. They were victimized by the Germans, and advantage was taken of them when they were ill prepared to resist aggression. It must be remembered that after the war the Germans may attempt to regain their influence in the east, and an effort must be made to see that they do not succeed in their aims. The port will not be surrendered to any power which has territorial aspirations in this quarter of the world.

"The allied powers will be free for the future to carry on their commerce unfettered and unmenaced by a hostile enemy and they will be able to pursue the same aims and realize the same ideals. These are in harmony with the spirit of the age. Japan has no fear of German submarines. On the seas we are more than her equal. We are a real naval power, and our people are sailors by heredity and tradition. Our fleets are patrolling the Chinese coasts and thus releasing units of the great British fleet for service in home waters.

Trade Routes Open.
"We are keeping an eye on a German cruiser interned at Honolulu, and it may be regarded as certain that there it will stay. The seas are free from German commerce raiders, and their new submarine enterprise may be regarded as negligible as far as real results are concerned. Do not take me as underestimating the power and resources of the enemy. They will strive as only a highly organized state can to make up for past defeats, and it is the task of the allies to hold and conserve what has been gained at the cost of so much precious blood and treasure.

Do Not Covet China.
"Is it true, as has been stated, that Japan has territorial aims in China?" asked The Telegram.
"Nothing could be further from the truth," said the Marquis. "We have no territorial ambitions in that country. Unlike Germany, we are in favor of the policy of the 'open door'; we believe in free trade and free commerce for every country. We ask nothing that we in turn are not willing to concede, even to trade rivals.

Friendly With U. S.
"What do you think of the relations between the United States and Japan?" asked The Telegram.
"The ex-Ambassador answered," said the Marquis, "I only regret that an atmosphere of suspicion should have been created between the two countries. These misunderstandings are to be greatly deplored, and the more so as there is no real justification for them. Japan has her own aims and ambitions, and never for a moment can they condict with those of the great power on the other side of your border. We desire first, last and all the time to be on terms of the greatest friendliness with the people of the great republic. At heart we have the same ideals, the same aspirations, and anything that would keep us apart would be greatly deplored by every lover of progress and national advancement.

Growth of Japan's Navy.
"Our fleet is stronger than ever. You will remember the Kongo?"
"Yes," said The Telegram. "She was dry-docked in Belfast after being built at Barrow-in-Furness."
"That ship was the last word in naval construction when she was built," said the Marquis, "and she played an important part in our recent naval operations. Within the past three or four years we have added three or four light battle cruisers to our fleet and some dreadnoughts. The Kongo helped to drive the German fleet from the Pacific and sent them into the battle off the Falkland Islands, where the death of Admiral Craddock was gloriously avenged. By wireless and from other sources the Germans knew of the movement of our warships, but they little thought that in leaving the Pacific they would encounter a fleet which brought them to destruction."

"I hope that as one result of the war our trade relations with Canada will expand. Already I hear that our balance of trade with the Dominion is on the increase. I hail this with joy and unqualified satisfaction. This is, I trust, only the beginning of what will be a great expansion to both countries."

A Noble Bequest.
A home for white crippled female children is provided for in the will of Margaret H. W. Watson, widow of David T. Watson, a famous international lawyer. The will, filed for probate July 17, after providing for bequests (totaling $100,000) to friends, relatives and servants, gives the estate, valued at $2,500,000 and including a half-million-dollar art collection, to maintain the home, named after Mr. Watson, to be established at his late country residence, "Sunny Hill," near Leaside, Pa. Useful trades and a "common-sense education" for those who are taken into the home are specific instructions in the will.

Catarhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Heavy Catarrh Cure acts through the blood on the mucous surface of the Eustachian Tube. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. ## The Best Rubber Heel Made

Costs You No More Than Other Brands

There is a vast difference between Cat's Paw Rubber Heels and ordinary rubber heels. Yet no difference in the price you pay. Cat's Paw Heels wear longer than the ordinary rubber heel because they are made of specially selected rubber and reinforced with a Canvas Friction Plug. This Plug prevents slipping on wet, icy, or polished surfaces.

CAT'S PAW RUBBER HEELS

Make your step lighter and your walking easier and safer than you have ever experienced. Cat's Paw Heels give enough sound to every step to keep you out of the "Gum Shoe" class. The hard surface of the Canvas Friction Plug does away with this rubber heel weakness.

Cat's Paw Rubber Heels for both men and women. All sizes and shapes to fit any shoe. The Canvas Friction Plug is standard price—30c each.

Remember, don't ask merely for rubber heels. Ask for "Cat's Paw" and be sure you get them. Look for the black cat on the box and the Canvas Friction Plug in the heel.

Summer Complaint

Was So Bad He Could Not Work

DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY Cured Him

Mr. Stephen H. Shaw, Fairmount, Sask., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and must say it is a fine medicine for Summer complaint. We have so much alkali water here in the west that last harvest time I had summer complaint, and became so weak I could not work. I was advised to try 'Dr. Fowler's,' so got a bottle, and in a few days I was as well as ever."

"Dr. Fowler's" is the original "Wild Strawberry." It has been on the market for the past seventy years. There are a number of preparations on the market today that bear the name of Fowler's, but they are not the same. There is nothing can take the place of "DR. FOWLER'S."

There is nothing "Just as Good." Insist on getting it when you ask for it.

The price at all dealers is 85c. per bottle. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
