WANTED—Cosy Central Flat, 3 to 6 Rooms, for two careful people. Ad-	Berlin, Oct. 22—The tendency of the German nobility, especially the princely houses, to show increasing regard to the navy as a career is evidently being followed by the German upper and middle classes, who in recent years have provided such a large percentage of the German army officers. Undoubtedly this is nowhim or meaningless turn of fashion, but is based on experience and a sane view of possibilities, for at present the German navy officers a career which many must find quite as alluting as the very popular service with the army. Perhaps the young naval lieutenants cannot make so much show as the handsome, grey-cloaked youths who set the pace in all the high jinks in the social life of Berlin; perhaps, too, the army lieutenancy is still to remain the best key to the marriage market: and	phone nervousness," in the light of case which had come under his professions observation, was a highly acute malady Proceedings were adjourned to permit further investigation. Although other large cities in German now allow women to serve on their school boards as actual voting members or a advisers, and this feminine element has proved itself most progressive and helpfur all attempts to induce the Berlin municipality to welcome women and grant the similar privileges have proved fruitless. Not recognizing defeat, however, the women of Greater Berlin are petitioning the council to allow them to have a small votice in the arrangement of evening classes for girls, hoping thereby to force a entering wedge for greater responsibilities in the near future. Some of these advantages are clearly set out in a plea recently published by a naval officer that the naval career should be still further popularized in Germany. In the first place, it may be doubted whether entry to any other profession or career is so cheap. An estimate of the entire cost shows that about $1,875 is needed before the young officer is self-supporting. This represents fees and maintenance, with outfit and pocket-money, for the period of eight years which passes between his reception as a cadet and his appointment to a post with adequate pay. The necessary pocket-money is estimated at about $10 a month until the rank of senior lieutenant is reached. The cadet corps is open to all	church and state which promises seriously to endanger its domestic peace. Last summer an education bill was passed which relieved the teachers in elementary school both from the control of the clergy and from the duty of giving religious instruction, which was to be transferred to the parish priests and given in the schools. The bill was strongly opposed by the clergy, but the young grand duchess gavher assent to it, in spite of strong adverse pressure in her court; and it will comint of orce next Monday. Last Sunday however, a pastoral letter from the bishop was read in all the churches forbidding the priests to enter the schools, and announcing that they would give religious instruction, but that the classes would be held in the churches.	y loiet Galbraith, Midred Brow Olive Livingstone, Jean McDonald, Bea Donovan, Evelyn O'Brien, Lillian Allise Lillian Devers, Eleanor Curren, Gertru Travers, Mary Curren, Marjorie Wetmon Helen Cotter, Martha Foley, Blanch Hrington, Margaret McCarthy, Winniff Campbell, Dorothy Simonds, Lillian McConnell, Daisy Belyea, Bernice Bielenber Brinkley Girls. Two accomplishments are specially useful to the ambitious young officer—proficiency in gymnastics and in foreign languages, especially in French and English. After twelve years' service the promotion to a captaincy is almost a certainty; six years more and he may take his place on the staff, and at forty-two or forty-five he should be the proud possessor of a command. The popularity of the career is undoubtedly increasing, but so, too, is the need of officers. Hitherto only a couple of hundred candidates have been admitted to the cadet corps yearly, but last year the number was increased to 240, and this year the number is to be raised to 300.	German vessel comes from Hamburg. According to one report, while the Hamburg teamer Lotte Menzell, bound from Norolk for Copenhagen and Dantzig, was at Horta, Madeira, three officers and eighteen men of the crew mutinied. The German cruiser Hertha happened to be in the harbor and sent several boatloads of narines on board the merchantman, who intested the mutineers and handed them were to the German consul. He formally consigned them to the custody of the capain of the Hertha, who shipped them on board a liner leaving for Germany. Another account says that the mutineers attempted to murder the captain of the Lotte Menzell, were arrested by Portuguese (soldiers, and then placed on board the Mertha for conveyance to Germany. Princess Garage and Rothesay, Find-	One of the first problems with which the City of Berlin is now faced is that of its ways and means of public conveyance. The city, having grown more rapidly than any other capital in Europe in the last twenty years, has found during the last twenty years, has found during the last decade that its traffic equipment is continually behind the times, though, perhaps, not so much in the material as in the geographical planning of the various suburban railway, tramway, and electric underground systems of which it is composed. This is perhaps natural, for a house is always to be built more rapidly than a railway, and Berlin is specially quick at house-building and rather slow at constructing an underground railway.
