

ANATOMY SHOWS THAT BABY LIVED

Coroner Porter to Hold Inquest Into North End Case

Jury is Empanelled—Detectives are at Work in Search of Evidence.

The detective department of the police force is examining more fully into the circumstances surrounding the finding of the body of a newly-born infant in a bucket under a house in Somerset street back of Fort Howe on Sunday evening by four small boys.

NO TRACE OF VIOLENCE. While there was no special evidence of violence on the child's body, the bucket in which it was found showed presence of creolin, but whether or not this was part of a plan for deodorizing or merely a common non-detergent with scrub-pails, will have to be further probed.

NEIGHBORS ASSISTING. The police are at a loss to trace the paravane of the dead child. However, the machinery the law is in operation, and neighbors to the place of discovery are assisting, as much as possible, in clearing up the mystery.

BOYS BURIED BODY. Neighbors say the boys buried the body in a garden plot at the rear of the cellar where they notified any adult. Later the police were notified.

THE JURY EMANELLED. The jury empanelled by Coroner H. A. Porter viewed the remains last night and the inquest was set over for a few weeks. The jury is composed of James Sprague, Joseph Nixon, William Crabbe, Joseph Lindsay, Charles E. Parrand, E. C. Brown, E. J. Todd and W. V. Hatfield.

Hard to Recover Citizenship.

(Vancouver Province.) In the House of Commons, General J. A. Clark brought up the case of the Canadian who has gone to the United States to better his fortunes, has become a naturalized American citizen, and has later returned to Canada. Far from being received with creases and fatted calves, the returned prodigal finds himself a stranger in his father's home and must wait five years before he can regain his lost citizenship. Meanwhile, should he marry, his wife becomes a woman without a country. This is a state of affairs bordering upon the ludicrous. We are talking continually of our need of more people. The best people we can possibly get are our own folk who have wandered from us and have returned. They are able to adapt themselves instantly and to fit into their proper niche in our national life. We should make it easy for them to come back and take up their citizenship again instead of placing them on probation like utter strangers. It is true, as Hon. A. B. C. Copp stated in the course of the discussion, that the naturalization regulations are the result of Imperial agreements. Even so, it should not be impossible to have their absurdities pruned away.

Note on Dogs.

(Hilicins in Bacolle Bestialites.) A dog should never be purchased, should never be made the subject of barter and dickerings. A dog may be rescued from abuse, he may be honored and accepted as a gift, he may be found and kept, and, in cases of great necessity, he may be stolen in a dignified manner.
