SUMMER CATARRH.

HOT WEATHER SEEMS TO HAVE BAD EFFECT UPON SOME PEOPLE.

It is generally recognized by physicians that many people suffer more with catarrh during the summer than in the winter. The hot, dry weather and the change from the hot days to cool nights seems to have a bad effect upon the disease.

Even after the usual methods of treating catarrh have been unsuccessful Hyomei will cure the disease and all catarrh sufferers should take the treatment.

In many instances Hyomei has cured catarrh when the patient has suffered since childhood. Quite a number of people in Ingersoll who for years have been unable to get a good night's sleep on account of the disagreeable tickling and dropping at the back of the throat, have obtained quick relief from a few treatments of Hyomei and the continued use has made a complete and lasting cure.

There is no stomach dosing when one uses Hyomei. Simply breathe its medicated air through the pocket inhaler that comes in every outfit and all germs will be killed and the mucous membrane will be healed.

The complete outfit costs $1.00, extra bottles, 50c.

For sale by all dealers. The R. T. Booth Co., Buffalo, N.Y.

A FACT PROVEN.

Should Convince Even the Most Skeptical of Its Truth.

If there is the slightest doubt in the minds of any that dandruff germs do not exist, their belief is compelled by the fact that a rabbit inoculated with the germs became bald in six weeks' time.

It must be apparent to any person therefore that the only prevention of baldness is the destruction of the of the germ—which act is successfully accomplished in one hundred per cent of cases by the application of Newbro's Herpicide.

Dandruff is caused by the same germ which causes baldness and can be prevented with the same remedy —Newbro's Herpicide.

Accept no substitute. "Destroy the cause you remove the effect."

Mother and Daughter.

"You have disturbed many of my theories," said Maltravers, candidly; "and I will reflect on our conversation; but, after all, is every man to aspire to influence others? to throw his opinions into the great scales in which human destinies are weighed? Private life is not criminal. It is no virtue to write a book, or to make a speech. Perhaps I should be as well engaged in returning to my country village, looking at my schools, and wrangling with the parish overseers ——"

"An," interrupted the Frenchman laughing; "if I have driven you to this point, I will go no further. Every state of life has its duties; every man must be himself the judge of what he is most fit for. It is quite enough that he desires to be active, and labors to be useful; that he acknowledges the precept, 'never to be weary in well doing.' The divine appetite once fostered, let it select its own food. But the man who, after fair trial of his capacities, and with all opportunity for their full development before him, is convinced that he has faculties which private life cannot wholly absorb, must not repine that human nature is not perfect, when he refuses even to exercise the gifts he himself possesses."

Now these arguments have been very tedious; in some places they may appear too much to appertain to the abstract theory of first principles. Yet from such arguments — pro and con—unless I greatly mistake, are to be derived corollaries equally practical and sublime; the virtue of action, the obligations of genius, and the philosophy that teaches us to confide in the destinies, and labor in the service of mankind.

CHAPTER VI.

Maltravers had not shrunk into a system of false philosophy, from wayward and sickly dreams, from resolute self-delusion; on the contrary, his errors rested on his convictions—the conviction disturbed, the errors were rudely shaken.

But when his mind began restlessly to turn once more towards the duties of active life; when he recalled all the former drudgeries of toils of political conflict, or the wearing fatigue of literature, with its small enmities, its false friendships, and its meagre and capricious rewards; oh then, indeed, he shrunk in dismay from the thoughts of the solitude at home. No lips to console in dejection, no heart to sympathize in triumph, no love to counterbalance the hate without, and the best of man, his household affections, left to wither away, or to waste themselves on ideal images, or melancholy remembrance.

It may, indeed, be generally remarked—contrary to a common notion—that the men who are most happy at home, are the most active abroad. The animal spirits are necessary to healthful action; and dejection and the sense of solitude will turn the stoutest into dreamers. The hermit is the antipodes of the citizen; and no gods animate and inspire us like the Lares.

One evening, after an absence from Paris of nearly a fortnight at De Montaigne's villa, in the neighborhood of St. Cloud, Maltravers, who, though he no longer practiced the art was not less fond than heretofore of music, was seated in Madame de St. Ventadour's box at the Italian opera, and Valerie, who was above all the woman's jealousy of beauty, was expatiating with great warmth of eulogium upon the charms of a young English lady whom she had met at Lady G——'s the preceding evening—

"She is just my beau ideal of the true English beauty," said Valerie, "it is not only the exquisite fairness of the complexion, nor the eyes so purely blue, which the dark lashes relieve from the coldness common to the light eyes of the Scotch and Germans, that are so beautifully national, but the simplicity of manner, the unconsciousness of admiration, the mingled modesty and sense of the expression. No I have seen women more beautiful, but I never saw one more lovely—you are silent. I expected some burst of patriotism in return for my compliment to your countrywoman."

"But I am so absorbed in that wonderful Pasta—"

"You are no such thing; your thoughts are far away. But can you tell me anything about my fair stranger and her friends? In the first place, there is a Lord Doltimore, whom I knew before, you need say nothing about him; in the next, there is his new married bride, handsome, dark, but you are not well."

"It was the draught from the door—go on, I beseech you—the young lady—the friend, her name?"

"Her name I do not remember, but she was engaged to be married to one of your statesmen—Lord Vargrave—the marriage is broken off—I know not if that be the cause of a certain melancholy in her countenance—a melancholy I am sure not natural, I am sure, to its Hebe-like expression. But who has just entered the opposite box? ah, Mr. Maltravers, do look, there is the beautiful English girl."

And Maltravers raised his eyes, and once more beheld the countenance of Evelyn Cameron.

BOOK VII.

CHAPTER I.

Lord Vargrave's travelling carriage was at his door and he himself was putting on his great coat, when Lord Caxtoncham entered.

"What; are you going into the country?"

"Yes—I wrote you word — to see Lisle Court."

"Ay, true—I had forgot. Somehow or other, my memory is not so good as it was."

"But, let me see, Lisle Court is in —shire. Why you will pass within ten miles of C——."

"C——, shall I? I am not much versed in the geography of England—never learned it at school. As for Poland, Kamschatka, Mexico, Madagascar, or any other place as to which knowledge would be useful, I have ever inch at my finger's end. But a propos of C——, it is the town in which my late uncle made his fortune."

"Ah, so it is. I recollect you were to have stood for C——, but gave it up to Staunch, very handsome in you. Have you any interest there still?"

"I think my ward has some tenants, a street or two, one called Richard street and the other Templeton place. I had intended some weeks ago to have gone down there, and seen what interests are still left to our family, but Staunch himself told me that C—— was a sure card."

"So he thought, but he has been with me this morning in great alarm—he now thinks he shall be thrown out. A Mr. Winsley, who has a great deal of interest there, and was a supporter of his, hangs back on account of the —— question. This is unlucky, as Staunch is quite with us, and if he were to rat it now it would be most unfortunate."

Captain Koenig of the government steamship Druid and Chief Engineer Roy of the Frontenac have left for Newcastle-on-Tyne with a crew to navigate the new Canadian ice breaker, Lady Grey, a sister ship to the Montreal, to this country.

AN IRISH COUNCIL.

British Government's Legislation Is Forecasted—Council Will Be Directly Elected—Basis of Representation.

London, Aug. 28.—The Daily Chronicle this morning, forecasting the Government's proposed devolution scheme for Ireland, says legislative union will not be touched, and that Irish representation at Westminster and the powers of the Imperial Parliament will not be changed.

The chief feature will be the establishment of an Irish council at Dublin, directly elected, consisting of 103 members, the same as the Irish representation in the House of Commons, with the addition of forty-eight councillors directly elected for larger areas by electors having ratable value exceeding $100, peers and clergymen being eligible.

This is almost the same as the legislative council and legislative assembly of Gladstone's bill, only they form one body and not two.

The Nationalist party, as now organized, would not easily gain a large majority in the council.

The chief secretary would, under the new scheme, be ex-officio chairman of the Irish council, and as representing the Lord Lieutenant would consult with the leader of the majority in the council regarding the appointment of the chief heads of departments, the head of the finance department occupying a position analogous to that of Premier, who, with his colleagues, would hold their posts dependent upon the vote of the council.

The scheme includes the reorganization of the Irish Government into two departments, such as finance, land, education, etc. The judiciary will not be molested. The chief secretary will be the spokesman of the council and its ministers to Parliament. All Irish legislation would still come before the House of Commons, bills being sent there by the council.

Financial arrangements will be the crux of the scheme. Simplicity will be aimed at.

The Daily Chronicle seems to intimate that Irish members of the House of Commons will be members of the council, which would sit when the Imperial Parliament is not sitting.

The scheme will be open for revision after five years.

RIFLEMEN AT OTTAWA.

Banner Week of Shooting If First Day's Average Continues.

Ottawa, Aug. 28.—The first day's shooting of the D. R. A. was well above the average, and if the high standard of yesterday is maintained it will assuredly be a banner week.

In the bankers' match twenty-five thirties were counted out, while last year all but two of the twenty-nines were placed in the prize list. Considering the adverse weather conditions, rain pouring heavily in the forenoon, such scoring may be considered remarkable.

The results of the team competition were: 1st, 10th Royal Grenadiers, 150 points; 2nd, Queen's Own Rifles, 150 points; 3rd, 13th Regiment, 148; 4th, 43rd D. C. O. R., 146; 5th, 48th Highlanders, 145.
