It is given out that the Victorian is to be used by a land company on Whidby island, but the general suspicion is that other plans are in prospect. Those who have been following the row between the International Navigation Company and the Canadian Pacific railway have a lingering suspision that the Victorian is to return to her old run between the Sound and Victoria. Should this be done it will add another interesting feature to the bloodless war which has continued so long and threatens to last to a finish. For some time the Victorian has been or sale, it is understood, as her owners, the Great Northern, have no further use for her.
