SPOKEN IN ANGER. PANNY FORBESTER.

Twas but a little word in anger spoken,
While proud eyes flashed through bitter,
burning tears;
But oh, I felt that fatal word had broken
The cord of love that bound our hearts for Thy tortured face, that long, wild look of sorrow, Like some pale ghost, must haunt me while And yet, how bright, how full of joy the morrow.

Had I but breathed one simple wordForgive! I did not hear thy tender voice appealing, Nor marked thy anguish when I cried,

Depart!'
Too blind to see thy pitying glance, reveal-The generous promptings of thy noble heart, How could I know that faithful heart was yearning, Though crushed and wounded to its inmost To take me back, like weary bird returning In fear and trembling, when the storm is

'Remember, love, that it may be forever;
To see my face no more by night or day.
Be calm, rash heart, think well before we Recall the angry word, and bid me stay.'

Dead silence fell; the song-birds hushed their singing, 'Enough,' I proudly cried; 'I choose my While ever through my maddened brain kept ringing
The death-knell of my love—too late, too late!

'Forgive, fergive!' I wailed, the wild tears streaming,
As, 'mid the monning trees, I stood alone;
'Love, let thy kisses wake me from my Thy pleading voice, thy tortured face was

That angry word, I may recall it never;
For o'er thy narrow grave rank weeds have grown.
'Remember, love, that it may be forever.'
Ab, words prophetic! love, had I but

My locks are gray, my eyes are dim with weeping; The face once loved by thee, no longer fair;
Beneath the daisies thou art calmly sleeping;
There a lone woman often kneels in prayer.
Ah, sweetheart mine, thou art so lowly lying,
Thou canst not hear the tearful voice

above, That with the night wind evermore is sigh ing:
'I spoke in anger! oh, forgive me, love!

PERSIAN ROSES. In an ancient legend, Persians say
That a rose-tree blooms at the gates of Day,
And once in each life, he it sad or gay,
Comes the scent of that flower from the far-off

skies,
And the heart seems lifted to Paradise. And, oh, the day that it came to me!— Tears cannot tarnish the memory, love, Of that moment out on the summer sea When the fragrance fell from above!

Your eyes were raised, and their tender tale Had made me forget the freshening gale,
Till the waves were dashing over the rail,
And the clinging arms of a ragged cloud
Had wrapped the sun in an inky shroud.
With the timbers straining under our feet,
And our feets raising under our feet, And our faces pale in the lightning's glare, We learned for the first time life was sweet, For we learned for the first time love wa

Across the path of that leaping wave!
Shut from my eyes the loosened sail
And lift my heart from that ocean grave!

THE WIND AND THE LILY. The lily lifted her milk-white bloom And she frighted the air with a soft per-And the warm wind came from the sultry

And he kissed her petals so soft and pale. With a fearless heart she reared her head,
For she thought there was naught from the wind to dread,
And she wrapped her round in her spotless And she shed her fragrance on every side.

But the wind grew warmer and stronger still, And he kissed her cup with an ardent will; And her petals drooped in the burning air, While her beauty waned with mute despair, But the wind passed by with a careless smile, And he sought new buds in a little while; Yet he gave no wealth to the perfect flower, But he took from her—beauty, pride and Maud Annulet Andrews. THE TURN OF THE TIDE.

BY C. A. SIMCOX, The harbor lights are dim with smoke

Which hangs about the under sky, And wraps the simple fisherfolk In lurid mist as they go by.
Along the shore the wind blows free,
Keen twilight kisses the wan sea
Far out; steer thither, watch with me The tender stars come out on high.

The sky is deepening overhead;
The sail flaps loose; the wind has died;
The water laps the boat like lead;
Faint ripples plash against the side,
And shimmer with unearthly light;
The harbor lamps are out of sight;
We drift into a starless night
Together on the ebbing tide.

How still—how strange—the tide is clack,
We eddy round—we drift no more.
What swell is this which sweeps us back
To where the gathering breakers roar
About the pale unlighted land?
Can any tell if we shall stand

THE TOTAT ABSTAINERS' CASE STATED. (Written for the Orillia Packet)

(Written for the Crillia Packet)
It is said we refuse the good gifts of God,
Freely bestow'd by Bis hand divine;
But the gift of God is the purple grape.
Hanging in clusters from the vine.
The gift of God is the golden grain,
Waving in beauty before the breeze,
The gift of God is the luscious fruit,
Bending the boughs of the orchard trees.
We do not refuse to partake of these.

But when they are thrown into mathub and

O then they are chang'd from good to ill!

The bounteous gifts of the Author of good
Are turn'd into poison in place of food.

To poison which courseth through every vein,
Tainting the blood and firing the brain And we do refuse, to partake of it then, So fearfully spoil'd by the hands of men. -THE REV. THOMAS SNOW.

A dandelion in a meadow grew, Among the weaving grass and cowslips yel-low, Dining on sunshine, breakfasting on dew-He was a right contented little fellow.

DANDELION.

Each morn his golden head he lifted straight, To catch the first aweet breath of coming day;
Each evening closed his sleepy eyes to wait
Uatil the long dark night should pass away.

One afternoon, in sad, unquiet mood,
I passed beside this tiny, bright-faced flower,
And begged that he would tell me, if he The secret of his joy through sun and shower. He looked at me with open eyes, and said:

"I know the sun is somewhere shining clear,
And when I cannot see him overhead,
I try to be a little sun right here."

THE LIGHT THAT IS FELT. A tender child of summers three, Seeking her little bed at night, Paused on the dark stair timidly, "O mother! Take my hand," said she, "And then the dark will all be light."

We older children grope our way, From dark behind to dark before, And only when our hands we lay, Dear Lord, in thine, the night is day,

Reach downward to the sunless days, Wherein our guides are tlind as we,
And faith is small, and hope delays;
Take Thou the hands of prayer we raise,
And let us feel the light of Thee! JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER,

The amount of matter in solution annually poured into the Gulf of Mexico by the Mississippi is estimated at 150,000,000 tons, at which rate one foot of land over the whole basin would be removed in 4,000 years. Similar calculations applied to the St. Lawrence, La Plata, and the Amezon reach the result that 100 tons per square mile are removed from the American continent every year. Again, it is calculated that not less than one cubic mile of earth is deposited every year in the Atlantic

The extensive display of safes made at the Indian and Colonial Exhibition by Messrs. J. &. J. Taylor, of Toronto, will never see Can ada again. A Bombay dealer with an appreciative eye has purchased the entire consignment, consisting of two car loads, and will take them back to the land of jungles, elephants and tigers.
