BRESNAHAN CHEAP.

SAYS S. ROBINSON.

Says Stanley Robinson, owner of the Cardinals, "I regard Bresnahan as the most progressive player in baseball. I went far to get him, but would have gone farther. The most heroic base ball measures are the ones that have brought returns. The right man was worth any price. Bresnahan is always doing his best, always making good. If he had cost $50,000 he'd have been a good investment. Better, one leader than a million followers."

THE UNPAYING GUEST

By MORRIS FRANCIS EGAN.

"If I meet him in purgatory," said Maginnis, "I'll be surprised and disappointed. The lower hell's got," and he pointed downward significantly.

Once when Mary Ann happened to mention an actress whom she had once seen and admired, Carmody said cruelly: "Opium. Drinks like a fish." Mary Ann burst into tears, and Maginnis smote the pipe out of his guest's mouth in a rage.

"I'll teach you," he said, "to say things like that!" And Carmody had slunk off to bed.

"You know," Maginnis added, when the guest had gone—"you know the actors can't be so bad as he says, Mrs. Towner. You seem to be a kind-hearted woman; how can you listen to him?"

"Of course I don't believe all he says," Mrs. Towner had admitted; "but they were his rivals in the old days, and genius is never tolerant of rivalry. Besides you know, everybody likes to hear evil of stage people."

"Lord in heaven!" exclaimed Mary Ann, crossing herself, appalled. "If the creature had a good wife, she'd keep him in order."

"I can see his faults," said Mrs. Towner, frankly, "and I think that after a month or so some of the Broadway variety might be knocked off him by an energetic woman who'd be willing to sacrifice herself."

Mrs. Towner actually winked at Maginnis, and her face took on a determined expression.

Carmody was the sharpest thorn in the life of Maginnis; he boasted, he borrowed, he lounged about the house from morning to night. He was harmless and good-natured, except in speech where the members of the "profession" were concerned, but of a selfishness in small matters that made the life of Maginnis a burden. Mary Ann, under the spell of Carmody's wit, and the charm of his voice, and the fact that he was a man of his own kind, and that's the trouble with him. Some of my little Jack's relatives said his uncle was a miser, because he asked me to carry up a pitcher of ice-water for him."

"And did you?" asked Maginnis, enthralled and beguiled.

"No," said Mrs. Juno Porteus. "Tofan, really; the ran-and with the pitcher after him."

"And it hit him?" asked Maginnis in a glow. "What can be done once can be done again."

"No," said Mrs. Juno Porteus. "Tofan; even in my excitement, I remember that I was a lady, and I aimed for the left-hand bend of the banister. I hope I'm too good a Christian to give even a bad husband a deserved. I could do a great deal for Carmody. He is only lazy and selfish, and most lazy and selfish people have a really bad heart; but you've got to pound them well to break the crust off. If I thought he wasn't a wreck, or if we had anything to keep us till I brought him to his senses, I'd have him playing in vaudeville—wearing a top hat and a tuxedo, which he can use when he chooses to make the tears come, and we'd be living quite comfortably. I'm tired of this life, Maginnis."

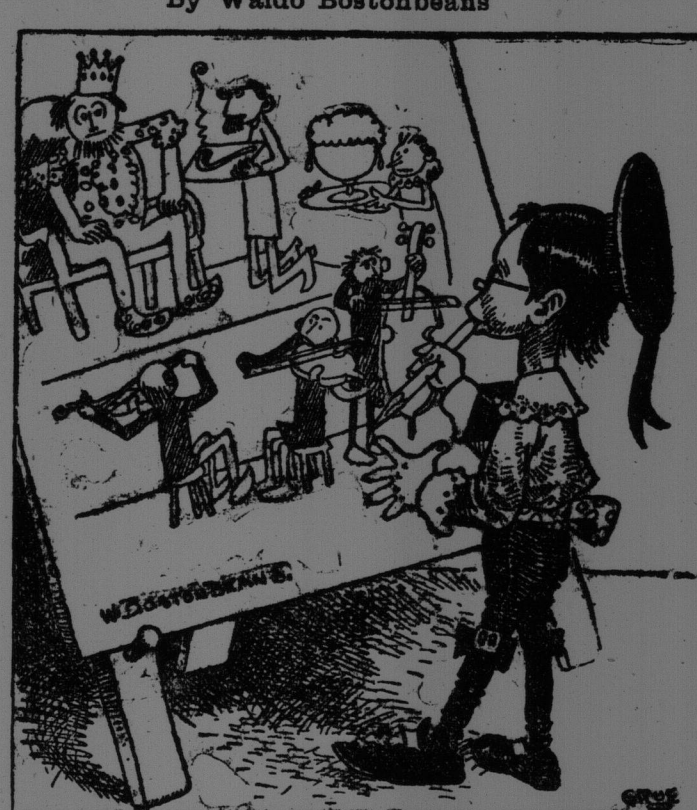

This conversation took place on the day in October when Carmody, weaned, unkempt and depressed, had walked into Bracton, having been rescued even the smallest loan by Maginnis, who had seen him the night before deliberately appropriate all the tenderness of the best-seller, while he told the oft-repeated tale of how he had refused the leading part in "A Parisian Romance" because Mansfield had threatened to kill him if he took it.

STORM MARS DAY AT CHARLOTTETOWN

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., May 24.—The heavens today poured cold water on Victoria Day plans and high winds rubbed it in. The worst storm of the month prevailed up till midnight. A football match between New Glasgow and Abegweit of Charlottetown was scheduled for three o'clock, but a downpour of rain made play impossible and the game was called off. The Lady Sybil brought three hundred seashell excursions from New Glasgow, including the Canadian Male Chorus Company, who gave a concert in the Opera House tonight. The Sybil will have refused the leading part in "A Parisian Romance" because Mansfield had threatened to kill him if he took it.

High Brow Nursery Lore

OLD KING COLE

It is related of Cole, an elderly monarch of unidentified period in history, that he possessed so genial a disposition, and so virtuous a character, that he was moved to give vent to his predilections by demanding to be provided with a cherished device for the consumption of tobacco by incineration, and also with the utensil from which it was his wont to quaff strong liquors—but

AMUSEMENTS.

NICKEL HAS VERY REFINED SHOW.

The old reliable Nickel manifested itself an emporium of pure but cheap entertainment again yesterday when thousands crowded its spacious interior from ten in the forenoon until 10.20 at night. It was truly holiday making on a grand scale and the men, women and children were greatly pleased. Kenney, the English humorist, proved an instant hit. His humor is dry and satirical, his songs clean and witty and his impersonations and tricks, piano playing, most laughable. The manner in which he imitated an English Johnnie, a curate and a coster-monger reciting Kipling's Absent-minded Beggar were side-splitting. Mrs. Kenney is not an ordinary performer by any means, but a gentleman who every action and speech denotes real art. The talking picture entitled His Wife's Mother, elicited roars of merriment at every show, and Miss Evans in the Song When I Marry You was as acceptable as ever. The pictures in the Days of Wilkcraft, Boys Will be Boys, and The House of Terror were good, the first mentioned being a historical bit of New England literature. This afternoon Mr. Kenney performed at 3.15 and 4.15, tonight at 7.45, 8.45 and 9.45. Talking pictures every show.

THE HAPPY HALF HOUR AGAIN

SCORES SUCCESS.

Were not in ship-shape condition, but having advertised to open and not wishing to disappoint, Manager Mundee opened the Happy Half Hour yesterday, and it looked quite like old times to see the large crowd present. In the evening seats were unavailable, large numbers being compelled to stand. In securing the services of Signor Stasulo and Miss Louise Behm as singers the management have been very fortunate. Having travelled all the preceding evening they only arrived a few hours before the opening, consequently were somewhat tired. They chose as their opening number, Stasulo and Love Me And The World Is Mine, Miss Behm singing the former, and Signor Stasulo the latter. Miss Behm possesses a wonderful mezzo-soprano voice of great range and volume, and sang a most difficult number in a thoroughly finished manner. Signor Stasulo has a splendid tenor voice of great power and while suffering from a cold sang in such a manner as to indicate that music lovers of this city will be furnished a treat before his engagement ends here. Prominent critics who were present last evening declared both singers to be fully the equal of any who have ever appeared in this city. Later on both artists will be heard in selections from grand operas which have rarely if ever been sung here. Tomorrow they will sing a duet number, and one that is a great favorite with everybody. The only other act, and the old man can't last long, was a song by a young man, who declared as for a Dog, and A Pair of Garters furnished a novel and enjoyable tenth of Nature is a splendid drama, and Two Turtle Doves is a love story. Same show today, New one tomorrow.

GREATEST SUCCESS EVER.

The new vaudeville acts at the Princess this week are even better than the acts last week and you know they were hard to beat. Mr. and Miss Rodreau, grand opera stars, made a big hit last night. Queen Dora, the international fire dancer, is the bit of the week, and Jack English, the hoop roller, is certainly a marvel. Tonight the Princess are installing a new orchestra. The regular programme of motion pictures are also on the bill. It is needless to advise all to be early tonight and avoid the big rush.

THE NEW UNIQUE AN INSTANT SUCCESS.

Many thousands have attended the new Unique since the opening Saturday evening, and every one is advertising the new motion picture house as the most up-to-date place of amusement in the city. From the front to the rear of the Unique everything is new. The new steel walls and ceilings, handsome mirrors, new chairs and staircases add to the beauty of the place. The picture programme and the singing of Jos. Kilocany, the sterling basso, made an impression in keeping with the surroundings, and all in all more satisfied thousands than those which have passed through the exit doors of the new Unique since the first show Saturday evening would be difficult to find. The Unique is catering to the public with the management's desire for clean and refined entertainment. Every gentleman knows when bringing a lady that he can do nothing but what would answer this description.

WHAT HE DID.

A man, now middle aged, whose hooded form was in the same fertile region, was wont to recall a very severe frost that swept the old homestead away. "And the next thing I saw of father," he would say at a thrilling point of the narrative, "he was sailing down stream on the dining room table."

"And what did you do?" would be the invariable query.

"Oh, I accompanied him on the piano—Woman's Home Journal."
