MAKING CURRANT JELLY.
In making currant jelly the best economy known is being practiced. Currants are thoroughly washed because they are very sandy at present, due to the heavy rains. After placing in the preserving kettle, a small quantity of water sufficient to cover the bottom of the kettle is added and the currants are allowed to boil until each berry is softened and broken. The cooked mass is then turned into a jelly bag and allowed to drip until the currants are allowed to drain out pressing. The final product of juice is carefully measured, returned to the preserving kettle and allowed to boil fifteen minutes.

Sugar in the same measure as the strained juice, previously heated in pans, set into a slow oven, is added to the hot juice. This mixture is allowed to boil five minutes and is carefully skimmed of all froth. A final test is made by dipping a small amount into a cold plate. If satisfactory in thickness, the jelly is poured into hot jelly cups, standing in hot water. Cups are covered and the jelly allowed to cool and harden. The melted paraffine is poured over the top of the jelly to make a perfect seal.

Formerly jelly making was over at this stage, but today it has been learned that a second quantity may be made by returning the pulp from the jelly bag to the preserving kettle and barely covering with water. The mixture is allowed to boil for thirty minutes and is then drained through the jelly bag. This juice should be measured and then bottled another thirty minutes. At this point sugar in the amount of three-fourths of the measure of juice is added. Boil juice and sugar five minutes and complete the jelly making as in the previous recipe. Only an expert taster is able to distinguish between the jellies of the first and second pressing.

Converted into Relish.
The pulp remaining in the jelly bag is converted into a delicious spice currant relish. The mass was freed of seeds by rubbing through a wire strainer. To two quarts of the strained mixture and one quart of brown sugar, one cup of vinegar, and tie in a cheese cloth bag, three sticks of cinnamon, twenty whole cloves and one teaspoon of whole allspice and boil with the other ingredients until the mixture will jelly when tested on a cold plate. Turn into jelly glass and seal the same as jelly.

The advantage in making second jellies is that the second quantity of currants is possible to obtain 42 eight-ounce jars of first pressing jelly and fifteen jars of second pressing jelly of the spiced currants.

BAGS.
The large satchel type of knitting bag, made of cretonne is passe. A lantern bag is now, made of colored or black satin with gold or silver cords. The bag is gathered at top to a circular piece which has a large enough opening for introducing needles and a ball and is trifled to a circular piece at bottom. This makes it collapsible. Bags intended primarily for light cotton knitting and sewing or bandage rolls are in the shape of a red cross or are of red, white and blue ribbon, three of the arms of the cross forming pockets in which things may be carried.

Another Red Cross work bag is made of white muslin of simple rectangular shape, the upper edges shirred over light wooden rods. White cords attached at the ends of these rods form handles that may be slipped over the arm. On one side of the bag is a printed shield with the words "Red Cross" above it. This device and the letters are worked in red cotton on the white material of the bag.

THOUGHT CHILD WAS DYING "CHOLERA INFANTUM" DR. FOWLER'S Extract of Wild Strawberry Cured Her.

Mothers should look well after their children during the hot summer months, as this is the time of the year this trouble is most prevalent. It begins with a profuse diarrhea, the stomach becomes irritated, vomiting and purging set in, and the child rapidly loses flesh, and becomes weak, prostrated and languid.

Mrs. B. A. Cirwell, Rosaway, N. S., writes: "I can recommend most highly Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. A friend of mine whose little daughter was ill with cholera infantum was given up by the doctors. The little one's mother asked me to come in and see the child. I told her I had a bottle of Dr. Fowler's and asked her if she would try it. When the bottle was half used the child was well. This cure was a miraculous one, for I thought the child was dying at the time."

There is nothing can take the place of Dr. Fowler's.

There is nothing just as good.

Do not accept a substitute, and thus endanger your life.

PERILS OF THE SECRET SERVICE.
To recall the atmosphere of "The Three Musketeers," copy of that book (beloved by so many) is flashed upon the screen with a sword through the pages. This is a subtle way of telling you that in this story well worth going to see.

The plot is laid in some mythical country where husband and wives disagree just as they do in better known lands (where would be the novel and movie plots if they did not?) and the recollection of the Prince with his Princess is the closing moment of the story which has a kidnapping and several, in a wild ride and a duel, as I have said.

Other good pictures were placed gold mining, showing the method of working, and the recollection of the Prince with his Princess is the closing moment of the story which has a kidnapping and several, in a wild ride and a duel, as I have said.

TO QUICKLY REMOVE Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes)
Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delicate paste, made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered gelatine. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining gelatine. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is delicate, you buy.
