No Place for Fish.—A prominent agriculturist was talking to a reporter about scientific farming.

"We don't farm scientifically enough," he said. "Many a barren tract could be made by scientific methods to blossom like the rose. I know a farmer whose land is to-day a miracle of fertility, thanks to science, and yet before he adopted modern ideas this farmer would have given his farm away.

"To him, in the old days, a city man once said:

"Why is it that nobody fishes the river that runs through your place?"

"Ain't no fish," the farmer grunted. "Why are there no fish in such a fine large river?" said the city man.

"Stranger," the farmer answered, "if you could git out o' this thin s'iled and barren country as easy as a fish kin do ye reckon ye'd stay?"—Weekly Scotsman.

A Best Seller.—"That fellow is too slick for me. Sold me a lot that was two feet under water. I went around to demand my money back."

"Get it?"
"Get nothing! Then he sold me a second-hand gasoline launch and a copy of 'Venetian Life,' by W. D. Howells." — Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Surprise.—It was the day after Christmas, and the hard-working postman plowed his way through snow and a cold wind, a sack of unusual size on his back. He ascended the spacious steps of a residence, and in answer to his ring a man-servant, in rich livery, appeared.

"Wait a moment, please," said the servant, as he took the letters. "The mistress wishes to speak to you."

The postman's eye brightened. It was the holiday season. Now, no doubt, in recognition of his regular and faithful—

"I shall be glad," he said politely, "to wait your mistress's pleasure."

In a few moments the lady appeared.

"Are you," she asked, "our regular postman?"

"Yes, madam," he answered, bowing.

"Do you come in the morning?"

"Yes, madam."

"And in the afternoon and evening?"

Again he assented, smiling eagerly. Then the lady said: "Well, was it you who broke our bell?"

A Distinction.—"So the bank teller has disappeared. Was he short in his cash?"

"No, he was ahead. It was the bank that was short."—Boston Transcript.

Cutting.—Henry W. Paine, the eminent Boston lawyer, once went to one of the interior towns of Maine, where a boy was on trial for arson. He had no counsel, and Mr. Paine was assigned by the court to take charge of his case. He discovered, after a brief interview with the boy, that he was half-witted. The jury, however, was composed of farmers who owned barns such as the defendant was alleged to have set on fire, and, in spite of the boy's evident weakness of intellect, they brought in a verdict of guilty.

The presiding judge turned to Mr. Paine, and remarked: "Have you any motion to make?"

Mr. Paine arose and, in his dry and weighty manner, answered: "No, your honour; I believe I have secured for this idiot boy all that the laws of Maine and the constitution of the United States allow—a trial by his peers."

The Big Show.—Post—"Thinks he's the whole thing, does he?"

Parker—"Well, I'd hardly go as far as that, but he certainly considers himself a quorum."—The Smart Set.
